Seeks $50,000 Balm From Doctor

MRS. DOROTHY HANNON

Pope Pius Tells Cardinals 'War Is Impossible'

3D BOY SEIZED, TELLS OF AUTO DEATH DASH

Doctor Named in Balm Suit

Beautician Says Rowley Agreed to Marry Her

Mrs. Dorothy Hannon, 34, who runs a Lynn beauty shop, asked $50,000 "heart balm" today from Dr. James C. Rowley of Lynn.

The suit, filed in Salem Superior Court, is an echo of a legal battle between the two in 1931.

At that time Dr. Rowley, who is 58, forced her to return a $7000 bungalow which he had "given" her.

Mrs. Hannon now asserts that they were "reconciled" after that. She says they mutually agreed to marry but he changed his mind and this time took back an auto.

"I first met Dr. Rowley in 1921, when he was our family physician," said Mrs. Hannon, at the office of her counsel, Alphonsus E. McCarthy of Lynn.

"He was very kind and nice and afterwards he took me to dinners and occasionally to the theater.

"Four years ago he became very seriously ill and went to the hospital. He was reconciled to his wife. But after he recovered they were divorced."

Walsh Given Eight Years

Had Already Escaped Chair in Killing

Edmund J. Walsh of Stoneham, who robbed a man at gunpoint and later killed a policeman, was sentenced today to a total of eight to twelve years.

By a quirk of the law he had been saved from the electric chair and found guilty of manslaughter.

The maximum for manslaughter is 20. Walsh got five to seven.

Today he pleaded guilty to armed robbery, with intent to kill and maim if resisted.

The maximum for this is life. He got three to five years.

Said Judge Nelson P. Brown:

Defense attorney William R. Scharton said:

"If it were in his power, he would give up his own life to bring back Officer McLain."

The district attorney, Warren L. Bishop, made no recommendation as to sentence in open court.

Walsh's wife was in the courthouse but did not wait for the sentence. A long conference in the judge's lobby preceded it.

Walsh shot to death Patrolman Isaiah McLain of Malden last November while being arrested for robbing Guy Antico, Medford insurance salesman.

The defense claimed, and the court ruled, that under the law it was only manslaughter, because there was nothing to show that the policeman informed Walsh why he was being arrested.

The government therefore insisted that the armed robbery charge must be gone through with.

'IMPOSSIBLE,' WARNS POPE ON WAR

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press

Vatican City, April 1—Pope Pius told a secret consistory of 20 cardinals today that war is "impossible."

He said it was impossible because:

"It would be so enormous a crime, such a foolish manifestation of fury."

"We cannot persuade ourselves that those who should have at heart the prosperity and well-being of the people, wish to push to suicide, ruin and extermination not only their own nation, but a great part of humanity.

"To us, as to many others, there is manifest the physical and material impossibility of war in the present most serious circumstance."

Prelates said the allocution was one of the strongest speeches His Holiness ever has made and that his red-hatted audience remained rigid throughout the solemn address.

"Terrible Calm"

His gestures, they said, were infrequent, and his delivery was marked by what they described as "terrible calm." They said his eyes, still bright despite the Pope's 78 years, semed to flash as he spoke.

His Holiness pleaded for the destruction of those who want war and proclaimed three days of public prayer at Lourdes, France, so that God "might illuminate the minds of those who have in their hands the government and the fate

NEW EXPOSE PLEDGED ON HULTMAN

"Startling new evidence" against Eugene Hultman as Boston police commissioner has been uncovered, Governor Curley asserted tod[ay].

Removal of Hultman from his present position as [illegible] District Commissioner [is] up before the Governor [and] on Wednesday.

Governor Curley said he would not be surprised, in view of new evidence uncovered by Attorney John P. Feeney, if Hultman resigned.

At the time he was speaking, Hultman was arriving at police headquarters where, on Governor Curley's instructions, he was permitted to look over any records he wished.

"May Resign"

Hultman, making his first visit to the building since he left the commissionership last December, also called Superintendent Martin King for a conference.

Governor Curley told newspapermen:

"Mr. Feeney, who is handling the proceedings against Mr. Hultman, has informed me that he has found additional evidence of the most sensational and reprehensible character.

"I have not had the opportunity to examine it yet.

"As this is April 1, probably Mr. Hultman may fool you and resign.

"Frankly, from what Mr. Feeney tells me, I really hope he will resign.

"Mr. Hultman is a man who has held important positions of public trust.

"If anything which was supposed to be all right, when dragged out into the light proved to be all wrong—dragging his name in the mire and besmirching—he owes it to himself and the state to resign.

At this point Feeney telephoned to say that Hultman was at headquarters and wanted to examine the police records.

"Let him see anything and everything," said the Governor. "Remember what the Scriptures say, John: 'Eat, drink and be merry' for Wednesday is examination day."

Feeney said he did not expect that the illness of Hultman's chief counsel, Clarence A. Barnes, who has a bad cold, would cause a postponement.

MARY KIRK BROWN — MAX BAER

"Here's to us," say boxing champion Max Baer and socialite Mary Kirk Brown, drinking lemonade or milkshakes or something together during a not-so-long-ago tete a tete in a Miami night Club. Today Max is quoted as declaring first that he will, second that he won't rush to marry "Miss" Brown, as soon as she's freed from her present husband, well-to-do Bobby Martin of New York and Florida. MAX AND MARY AGAIN REPORTED TO WED

By Associated Press

Sacramento, Cal., April 1—The Sacramento Union says Max Baer, world's heavyweight champion, will marry Mary Kirk Brown, Broadway socialite, some time this summer or just as soon as Miss Brown's husband, Bobby Martin, of New York and Florida, obtains his divorce.

The paper says Baer gave out the story before he left here for Chicago Thursday and asked it not be released until his arrival in Chicago.

Baer said he was going to New York "to court the sweetest girl in the world" and didn't care who knows it now, the Union says.

Miss Brown was discovered in Sacramento two weeks ago under an assumed name, and the champion showed her around for several days before he admitted her identity.

"There is no romance in our meeting," he said at that time, but amended his statement Thursday as he boarded the train.

"You can tell the world I love her," he said. "We're in love and we're going to be married."

Baer, in Chicago, Says "Nothing to It"

Chicago, April 1 (AP)—For about the twentieth time, Max Baer today denied current reports that he planned to marry Mary Kirk Brown, Broadway socialite, after all.

"That romance blew up along the shores of Miami," the heavyweight champion said as he yawned healthily today.

"I hear Mrs. Brown obtained a divorce last week, so I guess that's how the rumors about us started flying again.

"Nope, absolutely nothing to 'em."

80 M. P. H. ROAD RACE BARED; WAR OPENS ON KILLERS

Opening war o auto thieves and gangsters, police today captured a third member of the band which allegedly figured in yesterday's fata crash in Charlestown.

The new captive confessed to his participation and that of three others, according to police.

He is John Kuliecca, 19, of D street, South Boston. He is charged with misappropriation of an automobile. The charge may be changed later.

With three other South Boston youths, one of whom lost his life, Kuliecca was in a stolen car race, he is alleged to have admitted.

James F. Norris, a Brookline attorney, also was killed and six other persons injured, when his car crashed with the stolen machine.

The war to a finish against organized automobile thieves and other lawbreakers was launched by Police Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeney, in co-operation with Motor Vehicle Registrar Frank A. Goodwin and State Public Safety Commissioner Paul G. Kirk.

The arrest of Kuliecca, police said, accounts for three of the four youths involved in the fatal crash. Kuliecca named the fourth, they revealed, and he is being watched for at his home in Dorchester avenue.

Frank McDonald, 19, of Third street, South Boston, injured in the crash, is under police guard at Haymarket relief hospital.

The fourth youth, Kuliecca said,

HITLER CALLS FOR ARMY OF 4,000,000 BY 1950

By Pierre J. Huss
International News Service Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service)

Berlin, April 1—A peace-time army of at least four million men by 1950.

This is the ambitious plan of Chancellor Adolf Hitler, International News Service learned today. The figure represents the minimum provided for in his conscription decree of March 16. The men will be called up from the classes of 1901 to 1915 inclusive, and within 15 years the four million will be receiving military training.

During the four years of the World War Germany summoned 10,000,000 men from the classes of 1900 back to 1870, inclusive.

It is understood the Reich, in addition to enforcing the new army conscript law, would seek to build up rapidly a reserve force by using six-weeks' training periods for two successive years for the classes not affected by the regular army conscription.

At the rate of several hundred a day, young men have been pouring into the German army in advance of the reintroduction of conscription, it was learned authoritatively today.

Conscription is not expected to be imposed until after the British-French-Italian conference on European rearmament at Stresa, April 11, and youths, by enlisting before April 15, have the privilege of choosing their own detachments.

While the army ranks are known to be swelling, reports published abroad that 380,000 youths born in 1915 were ordered to appear today for medical examination preparatory to conscription were officially branded as false.

French Air Fleet to Equal Hitler's by 1936

By Associated Press

Paris, April 1—Gen. Victor Denain, minister of aviation, told the Chamber of Deputies today the building program for the French air corps will make it equal to Germany's before the year is out.

Asking the passage of a bill to give the air corps autonomy for the first time since it was created in 1928, General Denain said the French aviation service was composed of 1500 average airplanes in 1933 but the accelerated building program would soon enable it to "reply to aggression against our people."

The chamber passed the bill.

Jean Renaitour, reporter for the bill, told the deputies the French pursuit planes were still too slow to catch some modern bombers but there still was time for France to equal Germany in the air "for Herr Goering's (German air minister's) program of 1800 planes is not yet finished."

ALIEN CRIMINALS TURN U. S. INTO EXILE-PROOF HAVEN

With millions of Americans on relief rolls, for whose maintenance the country is struggling under a heavy unbearable burden of taxation, thousands of deportable aliens, many guilty of violating the criminal laws, are being permitted to remain here illegally.

Who are these aliens?

What are the crimes of which they have been convicted?

How have they managed to escape deportation?

All this and more will be told in a series of articles, starting in the Boston Evening American today.

The problem is of vital importance. Pending before the House of Representatives today is a bill, introduced by Representative Kerr, making it legal for these aliens, and other like them, to remain here and even, in many cases, to become American citizens.

By SANFORD E. STANTON
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Defying Congress and ignoring the mandatory provisions of the law, the Department of Immigration, under authority of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, has allowed, during the past year, hundreds of deportable aliens to remain in this country and at liberty.

A confessed killer, convicted violators of the narcotic laws, perjurers, thieves, a forger and women of loose morals are among the criminals found among these aliens.

They have been classified as "hardship cases."

To rate such classification the alien must show close relationship to an American citizen.

Frances Perkins

Deportation in these "hardship" cases has been halted arbitrarily on the grounds it would result in destroying family life.

THERE IS NOTHING IN THE IMMIGRATION LAW NOR IN ANY SPECIAL ACT OF CONGRESS TO AUTHORIZE THE CREATION OF THE "HARDSHIP CASE' CLASSIFICATION.

To the contrary—

The 73rd Congress, in session last year, was asked—and refused by a large vote—to grant a request made by the Secretary of Labor for discretionary power which would have legalized the arbitrary action in the "hardship" cases.

The only authority claimed by the Department of Immigration is a suggestion, contained in a resolution, adopted by the committee on immigration and naturalization of the House of Representatives, meeting June 18, 1934, in executive session.

The records of the Immigration Department show 8879 aliens deported during the fiscal year, ending June 30, 1934. For the preceding fiscal year there were 19,865 deportations.

With the sharp drop in deportations came a rapid rise in the number of "hardship" cases.

When the 73rd Congress failed to act on the request of Secretary Perkins for additional discretionary power, the immigration authorities acted promptly to continue the "hardship" cases until another Congress could assemble.

Now, the new Congress has been asked to enact the measure, defeated a year ago.

A nation-wide propaganda campaign has been waged in the year that has intervened by the department of immigration. The story of approximately 500 "hardship" cases has been given wide publicity. In the main, these cases deal with children.

Serious Problem

Unquestionably these special cases represent a serious problem. It was to determine whether their solution rested on the vesting in the secretary of labor of broad discretionary power, that the Hearst newspapers determined to investigate the histories of the aliens involved.

In the first place, inquiry disclosed that the records of the immigration department were often faulty. Criminal aliens, released on their own recognizance, despite the fact that many were guilty of the most serious offenses, were not to be found at the addresses in possession of the government authorities.

In New York City alone out of eight criminal aliens, freed as "hardship" cases, seven could not be located at the addresses on file in the immigration department.

Aliens who violate the narcotic laws by selling drugs are mandatorily deportable. It is one of the most serious offenses in the immigration laws.

With that in mind, read this brief history of the case of Dr. Filiberto A. Bonaventura. He is an alien who entered the country illegally and who never made any serious effort to legalize his status.

Bonaventura was arrested, tried, convicted and sentenced for violating the narcotic laws. His arrest occurred in Ohio. His present address on the records of the immigration department is Guerneville road, Sonoma county, California.

Bonaventura was convicted and sentenced March 29, 1932. He is still in the country, free to come and go on his own recognizance.

Tremendous influence was exerted in Bonaventura's behalf, as the records of the immigration department disclose. There is a letter, sent by the department to a former secretary of the Treasury, dated November 1, 1933, which reads in part:

"I have the honor to advise you that, considering all of the circumstances in the case of Dr. Filiberto A. Bonaventura, a decision has been deferred until July 1, 1934."

Bonaventura has an American born wife and a child, born in this country. That is the ground for listing his case as "hardship."

In re: Filiberto A. Bonaventura.

"While there seems to be no alternative to holding that this alien has been convicted of a sentence for violation of a narcotic law, it is felt that the circumstances related in the board memorandum, it is felt that deportation should be the proper punishment than is warranted by the facts."

Bonaventura, according to the above-mentioned board's memorandum, was caught by federal narcotic agents, pleaded guilty and paid a fine. He received the benefit of a suspended jail term.

Wife Informer

Cornelis Dobbelaer, of Detroit, Mich., is another "hardship" case.

In order not to part Dobbelaer from his wife, the authorities failed to deport the alien, here illegally and charged with violating the prohibition laws. Yet the records of the immigration department show that it was this same wife who informed the authorities information that Dobbelaer was an illegal alien.

Here are the facts in Jerry or Genaro Damasco's case. He is listed as living at 1649 Bartow avenue, the Bronx, New York, no one at that address knows him.

Damasco came into the country, illegally by deserting from a ship. On August 19, 1924, he married an American girl.

Just 19 days later Damasco was sentenced to serve 25 days on Welfare Island for violating the law.

Yet the department of immigration lists Damasco as a "hardship" case on the grounds he should not be separated from his wife.

These are only a few of the hundreds of "hardship" cases now accumulating in the department of immigration.

Officials of the department admit that tremendous pressure is being brought to bear on these constantly.

De Valera Urges World League to Prevent War

By CHARLES A. SMITH
Copyright, 1935, by International News Service

Dublin, April 1—Fearful nothing he can say or do would prevent the nations of Europe from marching to a new war once they become determined to do so, Eamonn De Valera, president of the Irish Free State Executive Council, nevertheless today proposed a new scheme for preserving European peace.

In an exclusive interview the American-born Irish statesman, whose "peace speech" at Geneva last year was be-came historic, proposed a Pan-European Association of nations, close-knit and mutual in its conception, dedicated to the sole task of maintaining peace.

Eamonn de Valera

"It is undoubtedly appalling to think that the generation which experienced the agonies of the World War and the depressions which followed that conflict are now letting things drift into another war," he said.

Change in Sentiment

"There has been a truly remarkable change in sentiment. Only a few years ago people spoke of another war as unthinkable. Today the next war is accepted as a possibility."

"Have you any solution to offer," he was asked.

De Valera gazed steadily at the peat fire burning in the grate of his oak-paneled private room on the ground floor of the Dail Eireann building. He threw a piece of turf on the flames as he replied:

"When you are appealing for peace, you can plead only in general terms, but it is my belief that peace could be effected if we could persuade nations to form a world league—a federation for security for all.

"I would begin with a European League of Nations, more closely associated than the present system. I am not blind to the difficulties of forming such a league and organizing it effectively to maintain peace.

"In America, for example, the thirteen original states, even after cooperating to secure their independence, were very slow in agreeing to a union that involved sacrificing some of their individual sovereignty.

Blames England

President De Valera's deeply-lined, wan face and tired eyes behind his gold-rimmed spectacles reflected the trying period he is experiencing, with new Irish Republican army troubles, a transport strike in Dublin and tangled relations with Great Britain.

It was the latter subject he next discussed, saying:

"It must be remembered there are two fundamental political problems in this matter.

"One is the partition of our country, and the other is recognition of our country as a republic.

"With regard to partition, we cannot admit any part of our people have the right to cut themselves off from the rest. Division of our territory originated in a scheme devised by British politicians in the interests of Britain.

"Concerning the republican problem, our people struggled for centuries for the right to govern themselves their own way. A republic and a monarchy are contradictory terms."

De Valera was asked whether he would care to give the people of the United States a special message. He spoke with enthusiasm of his regard for America and his visits there and of the fact he has watched with greatest interest the efforts of President Roosevelt to secure national recovery.

"I simply want the people of America to know," he said, "that we are not unhopeful in our efforts to meet the depression, which has particularly affected us on account of the special pressure brought to bear by Britain in the hope of compelling us to surrender our rights.

"I wish the people of the United States every success in their great fight toward recovery, and I am confident they will achieve it."

BRITISH, SOVIET VIEWS AGREE

By Associated Press

London, April 1—Official quarters stated today that Captain Anthony Eden, Lord Privy Seal, had reported to the government that the British and Russian views on the creation of a collective security system for Europe were "identical."

It was said that Captain Eden, on his visit to Moscow, had received from the Russians a promise that they would give full co-operation to the system which Great Britain has been attempting to underwrite.

The Russians, like Great Britain, were said to hope that Germany will decide to participate in the system.

Despite this reported similarity of the aims of the two nations, no undue optimism was expressed in British official circles.

Eden was on his way to Warsaw today. He then will go to Praha, Czechoslovakia.

A spokesman said it was impossible to determine whether progress had been made until Captain Eden's personal account, to be rendered when he returns, is examined.

It was rumored unofficially that Russia might be invited to the coming conference at Stresa, of Great Britain, France and Italy, but officials said that was unlikely.

600,000 UNDER ARMS IN ITALY

By Associated Press

Rome, April 1—Italy's military class of 1914—250,000 strong—today was called to the colors as the 20-year-olds began the compulsory military training required of all Italian males.

With the retention under arms of the class of 1913, which normally would have been mustered out when the new class came in, and with the calling to the colors of the class of 1911, Italy now has an army of more than 600,000 men mobilized.

CREGG DEFIES Leaders in Shift

District Attorney Hugh A. Cregg of Essex County today named John E. Wilson of Lynn his first assistant in place of Charles A. Green of Salem. The action came over protests of county Republican leaders.

Wilson has been second assistant. His post was taken by John J. Ryan, Jr., of Haverhill, who had been third assistant. Randall T. Cox of Marblehead, son of Judge Louis Cox, was named third assistant.

War Now Impossible, Pope Warns World

of peoples in the present sad anxiety of a time which leads to fear for a still sadder future."

The Pope told the cardinals that war "would be so enormous a crime, so foolish a manifestation of fury, we believe it absolutely impossible."

If, however, there is someone who wishes to commit "this nefarious crime," then, the Holy Father said, he could do nothing else than pray to God to "destroy those peoples who desire war."

At this moment, he continued, the "clamor of war is universally diffused and the cause of agitation to all and arouses in everyone the greatest fear."

It is for this reason, he said, he wished to speak today through his Apostolic office.

Reason to Be 'Sad'

The Pontiff said the "enormous crime," which he regarded with such abhorrence, would result if "peoples once more take up arms one against the other and if once more the blood of brothers is spilled and if destruction and ruin are spread on the earth and in the sea and the sky."

After his presentation of the canonization of the Blessed Thomas More and Bishop John Fisher for approval of the cardinals, the Pope said that despite this reason for profound joy "wherever we turn our eyes to that frightful crisis economic, political and especially moral—in which humanity is caught, when we consider the consequences still more tragic that one fears for the future, there is indeed reason to be deeply sad."

Pope Pius said:

"However, it is true that while damage from the last European war has not yet been repaired, here again the horizon is darkened with thick clouds, pierced by sinister rays—something which keeps mind in suspense and trembling.

'Great Signs'

"The words of Jesus Christ are recalled to our minds. 'You shall hear of wars and sedition.'

"There will be 'pestilences and famine and terror from heaven; and there shall be great signs; men withering away from fear and expectation of what shall come upon the whole world.'

"It was for this reason, said His Holiness, that he wished to speak today. He declared:

"In fact, if in every time men have need of Christian virtue and of hope, it is especially necessary they have recourse to it with greater intensity in these calamitous times, believing for certain they themselves and their affairs are governed by the sign of God."

BELGIAN "NEW DEAL" DECREED

Brussels, April 1—Three royal decrees to make effective the program of Premier Paul Van Zeeland under the so-called "full powers" granted him until April, 1936, were published in the official gazette today.

The decree authorized the government to proceed with conversion of long and short term internal and external loans of the Belgian Congo, to reorganize legislation governing state allocations to indemnities, subsidies and pensions and to regulate monetary circulation and reduce taxes.

Belgium's new franc, meanwhile valued at 72 per cent of its former gold parity, stood its first test as the markets reopened after being closed since Wednesday.

HITLER WINS IN MEMEL CLASH

By International News Service

London, April 1—Representing a major diplomatic victory for Germany, Great Britain, France and Italy have made representations to the Lithuanian government regarding Memel. Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon announced in the House of Commons today.

The tri-partite representations charged the Memel situation is "incompatible with the principles of autonomy granted the territory by statute" and declared it is the "duty of the Lithuanian government to bring the situation to an end without delay."

For months Germany has been demanding international intervention in behalf of the Reich charges the German population, which is preponderant, has been stripped of rights guaranteed by the statute.

The German agitation reached a climax recently when 91 German Nazis were sentenced to death or long prison terms for an alleged plot to overthrow Lithuanian rule in Memel and establish a Nazi regime. Four of the Nazis were sentenced to die.

MISS BARBARA SELLARS OF LONGMEADOW

TYPICAL GIRL STUDENT AN ATHLETE

By HELEN McPHERSON

Hair—reddish brown.
Eyelashes—longest you ever saw.

She is Barbara Sellars of Longmeadow.

An be it said right here and now in these days of girl first basemen, sprinters and what not, Barbara is not an all-around athlete.

Her sporting hobby is the more intricate art of fencing, in which she takes a lively interest, and wields a wicked foil.

Pageants always include her, and she has sung in the choir since she entered college, winning a place in competition each year.

She is not only beautiful but smart.

Now a senior, Miss Sellars has earned money in various collegiate activities to pay part of her expenses—or for spending money—every year, and is now advertising manager of the Wellesley College News.

But we really should return to those eyelashes, and that luxuriant hair, just verging on the red.

Twice her classmates have elected her "factotum"—which believe it or not, Mr. Ripley, means she is officially recognized one of the two loveliest girls in her class.

GATTI'S PARTY

Fan Dance, Jazz, Opera's Good-by

LILY PONS LAURITZ MELCHIOR

Doing Their "Strong Girl" Stuff

By Associated Press

New York, April 1—The likeness of Giulio Gatti-Casazza was flashed on the screen. Cheers and applause roared through the Metropolitan Opera House. The ovation merged into the strains of "Auld Lang Syne." The audience stood and sang.

It was the farewell tribute of New York to the impresario of the "Met"—the giant, bresy-bearded Gatti, whose regime of 27 years came to an end with last night's "surprise party."

The demonstration kept up until Mr. Gatti came to the front of his box in the "golden horseshoe" and, with his right arm outstretched, saluted the full company of the Metropolitan, grouped on the stage.

The curtain went down on Mr. Gatti's career with the orchestra still playing . . . "Should auld acquaintance be forgot".

In a few weeks, the aging impresario will go to his villa in northern Italy, into retirement after almost half a century in grand opera.

"Pagliacci" was put on amid football surroundings with Lawrence Tibbets making a flying tackle to bring down Charles Hackett.

The "Nibelung Ring" operas of Richard Wagner were given a "stream-lining." Billed as the "Nibelungen Ringling Brothers-Barnum, Bailey & Gnetterdaemmerung," the entire series was presented in four circus rings in the record-making time of six minutes and 17 seconds.

But the howls of the crowd, which packed every bit of standing room, reached their peak with the vaudeville team of Pons & Melchior in "Alley-Oop."

They Lily Pons and 250-pound Lauritz Melchior brought down the house with their acrobatics, climaxed with the stupendous feat of Mlle. Pons, with one arm, lifting the mountainous Dane high above her head—with the aid of an unseen wire.

Preceding the "surprise party" was a serious program that ended with the finale of Act II of "Aida." Gatti's favorite opening-night opera since he came to the Metropolitan in 1908.

BARBARA Plea May Be DENIED

RESIDENCE IN RENO ISSUE

By International News Service

Reno, Nev., April 1—Over Princess Barbara Hutton Mdivani's divorce horizon there swept a cloud today, bringing a frown to the pretty brow of the blonde "five-and-ten" heiress and a stern edict from her attorneys.

"The princess," they said in unison, "will have nothing to say."

"Nothing?" they were asked.

"Absolutely nothing."

Cause of the speech restriction was a report which reached the ears of the lawyers, Millard Tompkins, Jr., of New York, and George B. Thatcher of Reno, that one of Reno's two district judges who decide all divorce matters may look with questioning eyes on Barbara's intention of establishing a permanent residence in Nevada.

The jurist told International News Service he didn't like Barbara's purported announcement in London that she was going to Reno to sever her bonds of matrimony with Alexis, youngest of the "marrying Mdivanis."

What Judge Says

The possibility was seen that if the legal hopper out of which fall Reno's divorce cases should deposit Barbara's on the bench of this judge he might refuse to heed her pleas for freedom on the ground her intention of becoming a permanent resident of the state is "doubtful."

"That London announcement," said the judge, "doesn't make good reading from my point of view."

And to avoid any more such possible complications the heiress' legal representatives admitted in effect, they have instructed their fair client to smile but say nothing.

And to set an example, when Tompkins was asked if he had said the Prince had not given his consent to the contemplated divorce, he stated:

"I did not say that. I said nothing about the case, and I will say nothing."

The Princess, who has leased Thatcher's two and one-story rustic home for her at least six-week stay, took a motor trip with her stepmother, Mrs. Franklyn Hutton of New York, and returned to spend the rest of the day in contemplation of wooded grounds in the Thatcher estate and the Truckee river as it winds down from the snow-capped Sierras.

Must Be Honest

She is using the Thatchers' servants until her own retinue arrives.

Barbara is a little slenderer than when she came west the last time, the time the prince dropped off her private car here to avoid a California process server who sought him in connection with legal matters in Los Angeles having to do with an oil company in which his brothers, Serge and David, were interested.

Dressed simply in a blue suit, hat to match and furs, she was a picture of blonde loveliness as she made her way from her car to the house.

She smiled for the press but that was all and the press had very little opportunity to speak, being discouraged by a gardener and a special guard.

A leading Reno attorney explained the possible obstacle in the heiress' divorce path as follows:

"A party seeking a Nevada divorce is supposed to come here to make this state their residence for an indefinite time. If, after arrival, this party decides to ask for a divorce, that is not contrary to the laws of the state.

"But, if the judge who hears the princess' case should ask her to explain her London statement he might not be convinced as to her residence intention and might become technical and turn a deaf ear to her."

Four Buildings Burn in Chelsea Blaze

Four children were rescued and four buildings were badly damaged during a two-alarm fire early today on Second street, Chelsea. Damage was set at $5000.

The blaze started, according to police, in the basement of the three-story wooden building located at 178 Second street, and occupied by the Winschebeaum & Company as a rag shop.

When the fire spread to the dwelling Captain Lehan and Hoseman John Wall of Engine Company No. 1 rushed to the second floor and rescued the Lourmer children; John, ten, Mary, eight, George, five, Julius, Jr., one-year-old.

Mr. and Mrs. Lourmer were assisted out of the burning building after their four children had been rescued.

Watch Out for Pranks! It's April Fools' Day

By DAVE EAGAN

Sometime between the stone age and the invention of paper towels, a bunch of the boys were whooping it up and they decided on all manner of things to do. Said one:

"DEATH PLOT" WIFE TO TELL "PLENTY"

Incensed because the husband she is accused of having pushed off a cliff will not come to her aid, Mrs. Lucille G. Hey, on trial today in Hackensack, N. J., promises she'll "tell plenty" and "spring a surprise" on court and public. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

"Let's call Mrs. (Blank) on the phone and tell her that her husband has been killed."

They laughed and they did it. Said another:

"Let's put an empty pocketbook on the sidewalk and tie a string to it so as soon as somebody picks it up we can yank it away."

They did it.

All of which is in warning that today is April 1.

If somebody tells you that you have a smudge on your face, laugh at them.

If somebody tells you to call Mr. Stiff at Kenmore 1342, don't call it. You'll get the Northern mortuary.

If somebody tells you to call for Mr. Bear at Endicott 6570, don't call that either. It's the Franklin Park zoo.

If somebody tells you to call Mr. Kaft at Longwood 8100, don't do that, either. It's the S. P. C. A. and they have plenty of cats there but none that will talk.

If somebody wants you to call Mrs. Fish at South Boston 0415, don't do it. That's the city aquarium.

We could, of course, go on and on. But you should have the idea by now.

In addition, don't walk under ladders; don't pull at your tie if they tell you it is out of place; don't bother with your shoe laces no matter what happens.

$22,000 Deal Hits Rock, "BUYER" HELD

Th steam shovel business, which appears due for a Boston boom on Saturday, fell down with a thud—and with one arrest.

Under arrest and charged with attempted larceny was H. E. Joy of New Haven, Conn., who allegedly claimed on Saturday that he was Thomas Rayon, "member of the famous Rayon family of Chicago."

Joy is charged with having attempted to mulct Adolf Kluehn of Needham, New England representative of the Thew Shovel Company.

According to police, Joy telephoned Kuehn's home, stating that he was in the market for a $22,000 steam.

The men met by appointment at a Back Bay hotel, where Joy was treated to dinner and told of having deposited a total of $287,000 in a downtown bank, preparatory to building a radio tube factory in Lowell, it is alleged.

Kuehn became suspicious, however, over Joy's conversation and a check for $3500, alleged to have been written out by Joy. Police were called and Joy was arrested. A number of New York pawn tickets were found in his pockets, police said.

Concord Girls' Freak Day Garb Is Too Scanty

The "Dionne quintuplets" were a bit too precocious for Concord High School today, and so Principal Martin F. Goodwin sent them home to be clothed more suitably.

They were wrapped in sheets, folded in baby fashion and fastened with horse-blanket pins.

The horrified school master ordered them home to put on some clothes.

Philadelphia, April 1—Letters . . . letters . . . letters . . . from old gals, from young ones, from fat ones and thin ones. And so today Charlie Connor, 26-year-old bartender who won $145,000 in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes, went into hiding.

Charles explained to his friends it wasn't so bad to have salesmen try to sell him everything from a Patagonian ranch to an automatic mustache curler, but it was the ladies.

They saw Charlie's picture in the papers—and also read about the $145,000. Some of them wrote Charlie they "had fallen in love with him at once," he said.

SOVIET WOMAN CLAIMS RECORD CHUTE LEAP

By Associated Press

Moscow, April 1—Vera Fedoroffa, wife of a Red Army officer, today claimed the woman's parachute jumping record after an asserted leap of 20,853 feet from an airplane near Leningrad yesterday. She made the jump without oxygen apparatus.

Mme Fedoroffa was reported to have been in the air 22 minutes after she left the plane, which was piloted by the Russian high altitude jumper, Kaltanoff. The latter, on March 5, claimed the world record for men, without the use of oxygen, with a jump of 22,100 feet.

"Upon jumping, I turned three times in the air, then pulled the ring," Mme. Fedoroffa said. "Then I saw rivers and even tiny houses far below. I felt well, but I was very cold.

"Although my hands were nearly frozen—I did not wear mittens—I waved to Kaltanoff, who waved back.

"I was carried over a village and bounced on the roof of a house.

"The parachute then was carrying me at great speed, but this was broken by the trees through which it took me before I landed in an orchard.

"I drove an automobile myself back to the airdrome, 50 kilometers away."

Mme. Fedoroffa has a six-year-old daughter, who, she says, is anxious to make her first jump.

FUNK HITS BACK AT DOG TRACK OPPONENTS

Funk is applying for a license to conduct dog racing in Revere.

"I do not quarrel with opponents of dog racing whose motives are honorable," he said. "But the opposition is built up by professional opponents and tipsheeters, who have spread untrue propaganda.

"With direct supervision by the racing commission," he continued, "tampering with the dogs would be impossible.

"Furthermore, we intend to build a totalisator as one of our first moves in the event the license is granted," Funk said. "With such a machine, hocus pocus in manipulating betting odds is impossible. The 'tote' is the infallible as a cash register or adding machine."

MAHONEY ENGAGED

Mortimer Mahoney, noted manager of pari-mutuel machines, will be engaged to take charge of the pari-mutuel offices, according to Funk.

He told the commission that between $250,000 and $300,000 will be invested in the project, with a payroll of $3000 a day for between 300 and 350 men.

"The state has legalized dog racing," he said in closing, "and our organization has as much right to run a dog track as others have to run a drug store or any other legal business."

Jacob Mendoza, former city official in Revere and a resident there for 29 years, also spoke in favor of the application.

TRACK PLANS HIT

Alfred S. Hall of Revere led the opposition, basing his attack on the fact that "we are not professional opponents of dog racing, but long residents of Revere."

He thought that a dog track would be detrimental to property values, morals and the good name of the city.

Reverend E. Ambrose Jenkins, president of the Revere Ministers' Association, also opposed the application. He alleged that the Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis Club, and other men's clubs were against the proposed track.

"Such a license," he said, would be destructive of morals and a menace to the community."

Then came a steady stream of objectors from Revere residents. Mrs. Catherine Kennedy, who owns the property adjacent to the proposed track, was the only one, in addition to Funk and Mendoza, to favor the track.

On the other hand, Carl F. Lendstoil, superintendent of schools in Revere; Mrs. Frank E. Rowe, president of the Revere Women's Club; John A. Liset, chairman of the board of assessors; Mrs. Mary Strong, former chairman of the school committee, and several others voiced disapproval.

"No community has ever gambled itself into economic security or to a higher moral plane," Lendstol exclaimed.

Daniel H. Coakley, member of the Governor's Council representing the Revere district, appearing in objection, stated that his telephone had been ringing steadily for the past 24 hours with Revere citizens urging him to speak against the track.

There is no obligation on the part of the commission to grant a license there, despite the fact that Revere voted for dog racing."

That concluded the hearing on the Bay State application and three who favored granting a license to the Old Harbor Kennel Club Inc. spoke.

They were Howard C. Davis, president of the club, who pointed out that Revere had voted in favor of dog racing, 5621 to 3031; Fred Andrews, high school graduate of a year ago, speaking on the unemployment angle, and John H. Broadbine.

'Like Alyce' For 70 Years

Veteran Ford Employe Was Born 'Transposed'

Battle Creek, Mich, April 1—Carl F. Holder, retired Ford factory superintendent, went serenely about his business of living today untroubled by the weight of his 70 years or the transposition of his "innards."

Physicians who took X-ray pictures of his abdominal cavity informed him his stomach was displaced into a position between the spine and heart.

Other organs have been shoved out of place by the stomach, which is now in the chest cavity.

His heart and lungs are three inches away from their normal position, and the diaphragm, doctors reported, is below the stomach instead of in the usual place above.

He was born with the organs transposed, doctors said.

Holder, who formerly was the "town strong man" and weighed 200 pounds, said he was not worrying about his "innards" if he had lived 70 years in that condition.

No operation to alleviate the disorder will be attempted, physicians said, because of Holder's age.

ALYCE STANDS ON OWN FEET

Fall River, April 1—Alyce Jane McHenry stood up today—for the first time in many months.

She didn't stand up very long, for the doctors did not want to tire her.

But from now on she will stand for a few minutes each day, until her legs, which have become pitifully thin, are strong enough to resume their burden.

Jimmy Neilson had no such difficulty. He walked all over the hospital on his last tour of inspection, and then wheeled Alyce Jane to the sun porch.

The 10-year-old Omaha girl's temperature had about returned to normal today, despite the excitement of greeting Jimmy and telling him "about her operation."

Jimmy was under observation and will probably be kept in bed from tomorrow on, until the doctors operate on him for his diaphragmatic hernia.

By Associated Press

Detroit, April 1—All office employes of the Hupp Motor Car Company, including the entire engineering staff, were dismissed today and locked out of the plant. About 300 persons were affected by the order.

William B. Huriburt, assistant to Archie M. Andrews, chairman of the company, described the action as a "purge."

Dismissal was an outgrowth of the federal court suit in which J. Walter Drake, former chairman asks that Andrews be required to resign and that contracts entered into by him be voided.

The management, some of the dismissed office staff said, blamed "leaks" in the staff for knowledge of affairs that reached Drake.

The employes said they had no knowledge of the impending dismissals until they read a notice posted on the door.

JOBS FOR LOYAL

The notice said applications for re-employment would be received from "loyal" workers.

"We are using the vacuum cleaner," Hurlburt said. "We'll move in the new furniture later."

Drake obtained a court order Saturday temporarily restraining Andrews and five other directors from putting disputed contracts into effect.

George L. Schein, attorney for the Hupp corporation, said the action was a "bloodless" purge.

"Disloyal employes have betrayed company secrets to the opposition and to the New York Stock Exchange," he said.

The exchange has called a hearing in Drake's case on the company's stock should be suspended from trading.

U. S. COURT ORDER

Schein said the directors have been summoned to a meeting tonight to discuss Drake's suit and the exchange hearing.

Drake charged the challenged contracts gave Andrews stock purchase, bonus and commission preferences injurious to stockholders.

Ten Women Tell Woes and Get Divorces

When a man tells his wife she "looks beautiful" and then throws a pail of garbage at her, that's grounds for divorce, Judge Joseph R. McCosis decided today in Norfolk Probate court.

Mrs. Isabel R. Sprague of Brookline testified her husband, Percy, also of Brookline, threw the garbage and then slapped her face. The suit was uncontested.

Mrs. Ruth M. Moody of Brookline obtained an uncontested decree from George W. Moody, also of Brookline, after she had testified he boasted to her and her friends of his conquests over other women.

Judge McCosis also granted uncontested divorce decrees to:

MELLON TELLS OF STOCK-LOSS TAX SALES

By International News Service

Pittsburgh, April 1—Andrew W. Mellon, 80-year-old multimillionaire, took the witness stand in his three-million-dollar income tax battle with the Federal Government before the U. S. board of tax appeals here today.

Mellon, white-haired and shy, walked slowly to the stand at the direction of his chief counsel, Frank J. Hogan. It was one of the few times the former Secretary of the Treasury has appeared in that role.

But his desire to disprove charges made by the federal government which seeks $3,089,261 in additional taxes and penalties on his 1931 income prompted him to appear in his own defense.

He regards the tax case against him as "political persecution" and claims he is entitled to a refund of $139,045 on his 1931 tax payments.

Speaking in a quiet voice, Mellon said he took up his post as ambassador to the Court of St. James on April 1, 1932, and remained there until March 4, 1933. He sailed from England in March, 1933, and has been in private life since.

DEFENDS STOCK SALE

Hogan took up the sale of 123,622 shares of Pittsburgh Coal Company stock by Mellon to the Union Trust Company. Mellon sold the stock for $500,000 and claimed a tax loss of approximately $5,500,000 on his income tax return. This transaction has been condemned by the government as a "shadow sale" and the loss was termed "fictitious."

"I had large losses—the shrinkage in my regular investments were colossal," the former Cabinet officer testified in explaining how he decided to dispose of the coal stock. "I also had had large profits on which I was obligated to pay a capital profit tax.

TELLS OF BANK DEAL

"I decided on those securities on which I had sustained losses to select some security for the purpose of deduction allowable for that respect. The Pittsburgh Coal stock was the outstanding stock in which I had sustained a loss. It was a stock that I felt was most suitable to use for the purpose.

"At the time I knew I could not sell the stock on an exchange. It was so large a lot that it was impossible. The only place there it seemed I might make a sale was Union Trust."

The ruler of the "House of Mellon" then told how he sold the stock to the bank for $500,000.

RELIEF CRISIS LOOMS IN PWA BILL FIGHT

By Associated Press

Washington, April 1—Administration leadership in both branches of Congress strove mightily today to get the $4,880,000,000 work relief bill back where they could eliminate the "direct work" qualification inserted in conference.

While the House debated "gag rule" procedure to resubmit the measure to conferees, Senator Robinson pleaded in the Senate that its spokesmen in negotiations with the House "cooperate" for removal of the protested clause.

Unless they do so, he said, others steps would be taken, indicating the conferees would be displaced.

The relief administration, meanwhile, with only $4,000,000 on hand, made no allotments today for April needs.

Harry L. Hopkins, the administrator, notified C. H. Fullaway, assistant director of the budget, that $167,000,000—the same as the March figure—would be required.

Fullaway said $9,000,000 of impounded public works administration funds could be transferred by order of President Roosevelt but no communication from the President had been received.

Of $310,000,000 PWA funds originally impounded, $48,000,000 was left last night. Fullaway said the remainder could not be transferred without congressional action.

Relief officials indicated a possibility they would not distribute the $13,000,000 pending action on the $4,880,000,000 bill, which would appropriate $880,000,000 to continue the present program.

With more than 20,000,000 persons supported wholly or in part by federal relief funds, officials said most state relief administrations had sufficient March money left to carry on for several days.

Senator Glass (D.) Virginia, head of the Senate group, appeared obdurate for the section. He had just informed Secretary Ickes all Senate conferees were opposed to sending the bill back to conference.

Robinson asserted four of the five Senate conferees were "opposed to the bill" and added it was "regrettable that the custom had prevailed of too frequently committing a bill to its enemies."

Administration leadership in the House lost an attempt to get unanimous consent to return the bill to a conference where it would seek to remove the requirement that one-third of the $900,000,000 allocated for non-federal projects should be spent for direct work.

Then a move was made to suspend the rules to reach the end sought. Debate was limited to 40 minutes, with a two-thirds majority vote necessary for the motion to carry.

ROOSEVELT HAD PLAN TO BOLT, HUEY CLAIMS

By Associated Press

Washington, April 1—The capital noted with interest today that both Huey P. Long and Father Charles E. Coughlin are engaged in an intensified effort to build up their organizations.

Political observers with eyes on 1936 did not overlook the fact that Senator Long, in a radio speech last night, devoted much of his time to an appeal for support for his share-the-wealth clubs—though he got in a few swipes at the Roosevelt administration.

Nor was Father Coughlin's announcement of a new setup for his National Union for Social Justice lost upon them. He disclosed the membership would be concentrated into state organizations, which would have nation-wide radio meetings.

With speculation about a third party movement forming the theme of much political discussion, Long brought the subject up when he said President Roosevelt himself once had a third party in mind.

"When Roosevelt was making all his promises before his nomination in Chicago and it looked like we would not be able to hold the thing in line, he phoned to us that he would run as a third party candidate if he failed to secure the nomination," Long said.

"Now the Roosevelt brigade is sounding the cry that they very much fear a third party in the United States."

Bouncing up and down in his chair before the microphone, Senator Long asserted that, after the bank holiday, some good banks were closed and others were opened.

"Low-down politics," he said, "were used in opening the banks."

Combining an appeal for his share-the-wealth program with an attack on New Deal measures, he said:

"They have posted laws and rules, books and codes over us to make our misery worse; they have hounded us with inspectors, clerks, regulators and bureaucrats to tantalize us in our distress; they browbeat the sick while they go through the death rattle.

"Help us! Help us! I ask you."

Previously he had said:

"There is food to eat and clothes to wear and houses to live in; they are all owned by the rich.

"The poor people cannot pay for any of them and the rich, who can pay for them, cannot consume all of our abundance.

"So our goods rot, our houses fall and yet our people perish because they are deprived of them."

RAIL PAY BOOST STARTS TODAY

By Associated Press

Washington, April 1—The beginning of April brought a bit of cheer today to the men who work for the railroads. A five per cent pay boost for the employes—550,000 of them—went into effect.

The total rise is estimated at $80,000,000 a year.

The boost, which results from an agreement growing out of a 1932 cut in pay, comes two days after the roads received permission from the Interstate Commerce Commission to place emergency charges on many kinds of freight, expected to raise $85,000,000 a year.

In granting this permission Saturday, the ICC refused, however, to allow permanent general increases designed to raise $170,000,000 a year.

Though granting the wage rise in accordance with agreement, the roads will soon seek a cut.

GUNS SMUGGLED Into Norfolk

Revolvers, reputedly smuggled into Norfolk prison on fuel trucks, which were to be used in the escape of five men were being sought today by wardens.

It was believed that the guns came into the prison broken down into smallest possible parts to make their detection least likely.

MATCHABELLI, Perfumer, Dies

Wild Gang Ride Leaves Two Dead

A happy Sunday afternoon pleasure ride ended in tragedy for James E. Norris of Heath street, Chestnut Hill, who was killed when his auto was demolished by a car driven by a speed-maddened gang of young criminals. Five passengers in his car were severely injured.

(Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer)

Tearing at a reckless speed through Charlestown streets, this stolen auto crashed into another car on Alford street, dealing death equally to guilty and innocent. Francis R. Ferris, 18, of E street, South Boston, perished in this car; police say he was the driver.

according to police, was riding with him in a second stolen car and escaped injury.

According to Kuliecca's story as given out by police, McDonald and Ferris drove a stolen car into South Boston yesterday.

Drinks and Race

They picked up Kuliecca and the fourth youth. Together they had . me drinks and then went to State street, where another car was stolen, and Kuliecca and the fourth youth transferred into the new machine.

A race was suggested and the two stolen cars pulled away. They were racing, fender to fender through Alford streets at 80 miles an hour, Kuliecca is declared to have said, when McDonald, driving the first car, suddenly swerved and crashed into the machine of Attorney Norris, wrecking both machines.

Kuliecca continued on for more than 100 yards, he said, then returned and removed Ferris from the wreckage, believing him to be alive. They could not release McDonald.

Ferris, who was dead, however, was abandoned near City Hospital in the car stolen in State street.

Norris, leading Knight of Columbus and attorney for Lloyd's Casualty Company, was killed. He was 40 and lived in Heath street, Brookline.

Mrs. Beatrice Norris, 29, his wife, their son Robert, 19 months; Dorothy McPhee, 14, of Heath street; Mrs. Catherine Helder, 27, of White place, Brookline, and William J. Helder, 34, of the same address, were all injured while passengers in the Norris car.

Frank McDonald, 19, of Third street, South Boston, alleged by police to have been driving the stolen car, was under police guard today at Haymarket Relief Hospital, although not seriously injured.

In the drive against automobile thieves, Police Commissioner McSweeney promised as a result of the tragedy to an innocent motorist and his family, the first move will be the smashing of the "Dripping Daggers Gang" of South Boston hoodlums.

Initiation into this gang, police revealed today, entails the theft of a car, hiding it for days while police search vainly—and then running the car at 80 miles an hour, ignoring traffic lights and police signals.

With a view to wiping out this gang and other gangs, Commissioner McSweeney, Public Safety Commissioner Paul G. Kirk and Motor Vehicle Registrar Frank A. Goodwin will confer, the Boston police head said.

"This is a terrible case," Goodwin said today. "I don't know what we are coming to. There must be a general tightening up all along the line. The courts must tighten up and do a job on these reckless drivers."

The police commissioner declared:

"This nusiness of stealing cars has got to stop. We're going to redouble our automobile forces to that end and I am going to have a conference with Registrar Goodwin and Lieutenant-Colonel Kirk and see what we can do in co-operation.

"We're going to see if there isn't a way of putting a stop to this wholesale killing of people on our highways."

Captain Matthew T. Killen, in charge of Charlestown station, said that authorities are handicapped in keeping car thieves off the road because the penalties are too light.

"If the theft of a motor car is made larceny, and therefore a felony, we would be justified in shooting down these hoodlums," Captain Killen said.

At present the taking of an automobile belonging to another is merely "unlawful appropriation" in the eyes of the law and is considered only a misdemeanor.

400 END STRIKE IN MILLBURY

Millbury, April 1—Striking employes of the Millbury Woolen Company, 400 in number, went back to work today, having voted yesterday to accede to the request of Anna Weinstock, agent for the United States Department of Labor, who urged arbitration.

Employes of the other four mills of the Hayward-Schuster group, in Manchaug, Franklin and East Douglas, vote on the proposal late today.

Miss Weinstock confers today with Winfield Schuster, treasurer of the company and member of the Governor's Council.

The workers asked a wage increase of 15 per cent and reduction of the work load.

WARE-SWIFT Hearing Delayed

Hearing on the petition of Senator Langone for a legislative investigation of the $66,000,000 Ware-Swift River project was postponed for an indefinite period today by the joint committee on metropolitan affairs.

Senator Madden, chairman of the committee, announced the postponement, the fourth since the measure was introduced.

Bogus Money Den Found

Federal authorities announced today the discovery of a racketeer's rendezvous in New York from which men and pretty girls are coming into New England with the counterfeit money.

The exact location of the place will be revealed, it was said, when the authorities find and arrest two girls and six men, now being trailed in this section.

The place was described by Assistant United States District Attorney William T. McCarthy as a "cesspool of corruption."

He promised a batch of indictments for counterfeiting shortly and predicted the roundup of the whole gang, including at least one "prominent public enemy."

A direct connection between this rendezvous and $10 and $20 bills passed in Roxbury and Dorchester has been found, it was said.

Four arrests already have been made.

ACTOR IN FIGHT FOR $16 WAGES

Charge that Mrs. Gertrude Putnam, Commonwealth avenue society woman, has refused to pay him $16 in wages was made today to the State Division of Industrial Safety by Joseph H. Thayer of St. Charles street, South End.

Thayer, who claims to have been an actor inthe revived melodrama "The Drunkard," which production Mrs. Putnam bought several weeks ago, said in his report that he was employed at the rate of $15 a week.

He left Mrs. Putnam's employment last Wednesday, at which time, according to his charge, other employes at the theater, including members of the cast, were vainly seeking their money.

John Made, director of the division which prosecutes in court for non-payment of wages to workers, said that a letter would be sent to Mrs. Putnam notifying her of the complaint.

BURGLARS STEAL Newton Safe

We enter a NEW ERA in Transportation

TODAY the new stream lined Flying Yankee makes her first scheduled run. Thanks to her speed, Portland is now but an hour and fifty minutes distant from Boston by rail. And you may travel from Boston to Bangor in air-conditioned comfort in five hours.

Let's turn back the calendar to a May morning in 1834. This bank was then fifty-one years of age. Great excitement stirred the city, for Boston's first steam train was to make a test run over the new Boston and Worcester line.

A party of directors and their friends, sixty strong, puffed from Boston to Newton in the breath-taking time of thirty-nine minutes! Since the track was not completed beyond this point, the entire party repaired to Davis Tavern in Newton to celebrate. They returned like conquering heroes the next day.

Down through the years this bank has witnessed Boston capital building several of the country's great railroad systems. We join with New England in a hearty wish to the Flying Yankee for success in this new era of transportation which it inaugurates.

Coming of Opera Climaxes Social Season

By Betty Alden

A SOCIAL LOOKOUT stationed in the crow's nest high up on the mast of the good old ship Beacon Hill would observe much interesting activity on the social sea this week . . .

He will see what might well be termed the flux of the social tide when the outgoing ebb and the rising flood meet, and pause, before going inward or outward, as is their wont . . . On the outgoing ebb the hundreds of Bostonians tumbling over the waves en route to Bermuda or other southern lands of sunshine and pleasure will give him plenty of items to mark in his log . . . some of them are probably seasick and wishing they were back at the lookout's station but most of them are having the time of their lives, and especially that mass of Harvard students who are cramming a visit to Bermuda into this, their one week of spring vacation . . .

MARY FROST

Debs Disappointed

TURNING HIS VISION over the land our lookout catches a glimpse of the smoke curling upward from the crack flyer which is speedily carrying the Hasty Pudding Club's dramatic stars toward Pittsburgh where a prominent list of patronesses and debutantes are awaiting their one-night performance . . . They left behind in Boston a disappointed lot of debs who packed the Repertory on Saturday night for the last performance of the show, expecting to be treated to a cabaret and dancing at the end of the revue as they were last year . . . alas and alack there was nothing but the prosaic lowering of the curtain to mark the finale of the Pudding's 1935 performances here . . .

The many, many Boston-bound craft which are swarming by, cause the lookout to shout to his navigator to heave to until the channel is clear . . . Boats of every description are bound for a berth at some dock in the harbor, bringing into port all those with passports for the opera . . .

Not only passports to the opera but to a nice family dinner party before hand are held by Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Allen and Dr. and Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, who will be the dinner and box guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller and the Misses Mary and Lydia Fuller this evening . . . Mr. and Mrs. Donald McKay Frost and their two daughters, Mary and Jane, have just returned from Charleston, S. C., in time to join the first nighters at the opera . . .

Charles Bacon to Entertain at Opera

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES BACON will preside in their box tonight with such prominent guests accompanying them as Mr. and Mrs. Guy Warren Walker, Dr. and Mrs. F. William Marlow, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hart, Jr. . . . On Wednesday evening the Bacons will again be hosts at a box-party . . .

Mr. Lookout will be almost dazed by the glitter and elegance which will spread out like a beautiful panorama at the Opera House tonight . . . after weeks of anticipation, Boston fashionables and many distinguished out of town guests will arrive promptly a few minutes to eight to fill the Golden Horseshoe and overflow into the orchestra circle and balconies . . .

After perusing the events near at hand a little long distance squinting through a telescope will catch the children of the Charles Jenneys as they romp on the beach at Sea Island, Georgia, burying mother and father under the sand and playing tag as they rush into the breakers . . . Shifting to Bermuda one sees Olivia Morgan with some youthful companions riding bicycles over the narrow lanes . . .

Return From Sojourns in South

A BRIDE AND GROOM from Boston, Mr. and Mrs. George Parsons Milmine (Molly Parker) are finding rest and relaxation after the strenuous partying which preceded their wedding, in sailing and swimming at Nassau . . .

The rising tide has just brought back to our midst Mrs. Robert Farley Clark who spent most of the winter at Pinehurst, Mrs. Albert M. Kales who found Mexico an entrancing place to stay for the winter months and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest B. Dane after a long cruise on their yacht . . .

There is a large and very interesting group of socialites on Beacon Hill who have a penchant for French lectures and entertaining visiting French celebrities . . . One of their most recent activities was the tea which Mrs. C. Nichols Green of Chestnut street gave in honor of Monsieur and Madame Boulanger . . . Her friends had an opportunity to meet not only the honor guests but several other prominent French visitors . . .

The next meeting of the Alliance Francaise will be held at the Copley-Plaza on Thursday afternoon at 3:30 . . .

Peggy Tarbell to Wed This Month

ANOTHER JUNIOR LEAGUER has chosen April as the month for her day of days . . . Peggy Tarbell and John C. Carman will meet before a small group of friends to pledge their marriage vows on April 24 in the drawing room of the Tarbell's home in Lincoln . . .

Miss Ann Tarbell will be her sister's only attendant and Edward C. Carman will be the groomsman . . .

Peggy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Tarbell, a graduate of Concord Academy and the Bennett school in Millbrook, N. Y. . . . her fiance, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest W. Carman of Springfield was graduated last June from Harvard and is in business in Boston . . .

The Rev. Norman Nash will officiate at the wedding and there will be four ushers, including Albert Haberstroth, Dana Tucker, George C. Tarbell, Jr., and Robert Horne . . .

Books on Parade

By MILES ALDEN

FROM GREEN HILLS OF GALILEE—By Cathal O'Byrne—The March selection of the Spiritual Book Associates.

The spell of the Celtic twilight is strongly reflected in these seven tales from the life of Christ.

Told with the simplicity of folk lore, the author here is at one time Melrose, Mrs. John Lewis of Medfield, Mrs. Herbert Pickard of Quincy, Miss Miriam Dickey and Miss Phyllis Russel of Walpole.

The spell of the Celtic twilight is strongly reflected in these seven tales from the life of Christ.

Told with the simplicity of folk lore, the author here is at one time Melrose, Mrs. John Lewis of Medfield, Mrs. Herbert Pickard of Quincy, Miss Miriam Dickey and Miss Phyllis Russel of Walpole.

But his mysticism is not the agnostic mysticism of Yeats, he who was unsatisfied with "Calvary's turbulence."

O'Bryne does not hesitate in his exaggerations and exuberance. But he is convincing.

With his eyes he sees the universality of beauty, with his heart he feels the universality of faith.

The individual creed of the reader will raise no bar to the enjoyment and understanding of this work. Each will draw his own interpretation, but the feeling produced by these tales is a reverence common to all mankind.

Those weary of the "best-seller" approach to the life of Christ will welcome "From Green Hills of Galilee."

This Is Life
ROBERT E ROGERS

The question before the house is: when is a politician not a politician?

Miss Martha Ijams, alumna of the class of 1901 of the University of California, seems to reply "when he (or she) is a member of my political party."

Does anyone imagine that Miss Ijams would have called Secretary of Labor Perkins "a mere politician" if she had been a good Republican? I doubt it. That is why women complicate politics.

Robert E. Rogers

They frequently get personal and give themselves away, instead of keeping an application of the old oil ready when they wish to make a political point while pretending they are doing nothing of the kind.

It has been said that a statesman is a dead politician, but I doubt if Miss Ijams would agree to that.

To her, obviously, a statesman is a Republican who is out of office, while a politician is anybody who is mixed up with that dreadful man, Roosevelt, to say nothing of his dreadful wife.

For if you have been reading the California dispatches, you remember that Miss Ijams was even harder on Mrs. Roosevelt than she was on Madame Perkins.

This in connection with Mr. Hoover's recent remarks on the inadequacies of the administration all this may seem pretty intentional and inspired, but I suspect that Mr. Hoover would be just as happy if Miss Ijams hadn't chosen precisely this moment and excuse to get herself on the front pages of the California press.

A Poor Choice

I think that Miss Ijams made a poor choice in picking Madame Perkins as a typical politician and as such unworthy of the honor of being asked to address the convocation of the University of California.

I take it that a politician in the cabinet is a person appointed for reasons connected with votes and unconnected with any previous experience in the subject matter of the department to which he is appointed.

For instance, Mr. Wallace, however radical, is generally recognized as knowing something about agriculture. He is not exactly a politician.

It is also pretty generally recognized that Mr. Morgenthau is not precisely a great financier and may therefore be considered as a personal follower of the President acting temporarily as a secretary of the treasury.

There is a certain amount of doubt about Mr. Farley as a postmaster general and philatelist but no doubt at all about his capacity as a politician.

Similarly, there is little doubt about Madame Perkin's past experiences and competence as an expert in questions of labor and industry in the state of New York under Governor Smith.

It is true that the left wing of labor has no use for her and that she is pretty generally regarded as a pretty dictatorial and high handed official, but of her knowledge and experience of the matters pertaining to her department there is no doubt whatsoever.

If she had been a good Republican Secretary of Labor—that is to say, an appointee of the American Federation of Labor—the critical Miss Ijams would probably not have objected to her at all.

May Explain It

Maybe the fact that she is a woman in the public eye may have something to do with it. It would also tend to explain Miss Ijams attitude toward Mrs. Roosevelt.

I sometimes wonder whether brainy women really like to behold their sisters too much in the public eye.

What bothers me most, however, is the contemptuous tone in which Miss Ijams uses the term "politician" as a word of foul reproach. In that I suspect the United States stands alone.

In England politician is not necessarily a term of reproach. It may be a word denoting competence and even honor. The English recognize that a statesman is only a successful politician.

Look what has happened to the "greatest Secretary of the Treasury since Alexander Hamilton." Hardly anybody has a good word for him under these new conditions.

In another year we shall be seeing a powerful effort to build Ogden Mills and Colonel Roosevelt, Jr., into the stature of statesmen.

Perhaps even Mr. Hoover, though that is probably too difficult a job.

Meanwhile, as I noted with some astonishment the other afternoon, they are beginning to hiss Franklin D. Roosevelt in the movie houses, a good strong hiss that greets him rather feebly answered with applause.

In F. D. R.'s hitherto unblemished reputation for statesmanship of the highest quality beginning to tarnish a little?

But I suspect that Miss Ijams, going her own feminine gait, has really opened the Republican campaign for 1936.

Probably unofficially and to the embarrassment of the master minds of the party.

But that's like a woman. At least she has brought the issue out into the open. The issue is statesmen (Republicans) against "mere politicians" (Democrats).

PRETTY GIRL THUMBERS WIN FAKE CLAIMS

Fake and exaggerated claims under the compulsory insurance law total 20,000 a year in the estimate of Registrar Frank A. Goodwin. This is the seventh in a series of articles exposing them.

Mr. X used to be the typical Good Samaritan motorist.

Everybody trudging along the highroad was welcome to a lift in his car. If good looking girls were a little more welcome than others—well, who was to blame Mr. X?

Only Mrs. X, apparently.

But she has no further worries and Mr. X. is cured. He has only a forty per for old ladies bearing burdens. Thumbers give him the nose salute as he whizzes by. Pretty girls can join the walkathon for all he cares.

An unfortunate experience cured him. It was on an April day just about three years ago. One of those gentle April rains was falling as Mr. X. set out to drive from his Braintree home to his Boston office.

Sees Two Girls

He had just crossed the bridge over the Neponset river in Quincy and swung onto the Southern Artery when he noticed two young women standing just beyond the traffic light on the crest of a little rise there.

They appeared to be waiting for someone and although Mr. X had never seen them before he guessed they might be waiting for him.

Beaming like a headlight he pulled over to the side of the road just beyond them, opened the door and called in his best gallahadish manner: "Goin' in?"

They smiled sweetly. They were young and not unattractive. They minced daintily through the new and wet grass by the curb and climbed in beside him in the front seat. It was a mite cramped but Mr. X was never one to mind such trifles.

Complete Account

This is the exact, complete, truthful record of the conversation that ensued:

Mr. X: How far you going?

Miss A: You can let us off at the South Station. We work over on Summer street beyond the bridge.

Mr. X: A nasty morning.

Miss B: I dunno what we'dda done. Another guy usually takes us in but I guess he was late.

Miss A: Charlie don't sleep nights.

Mr. X: Ha, ha. You girls live in Quincy?

Miss A: I live on Hancock street. May lives down by the bridge.

Miss B: I used to live at Norfolk Downs.

Mr. X: I live in Braintree.

Miss A: I bet you're married.

Mr. X: Worried expression? Ha, ha.

Miss B: It depends on whatcha tell 'em.

Mr. X ha, haed and the girls squealed.

Tire Blows

Mr. X swung towards the curb to avoid a passing car that was cutting in. His right front tire hit a rock in front of a tree and the tire blew. That was all.

Mr. X—That's that. Everyone okey?

Miss A—Sure. Now you got a nice job.

Miss B—Gee, you done well to get out of the way of that guy cutting in. We shoulda got his number.

Mr. X jacked up the wheel and put his spare tire on. The girls remained in the car out of the rain and whispered.

From that point to the South Station this was the complete conversation:

Mr. X—Well, that's finished. Look at my hands—filthy.

Miss A—Don't mind a little thing like that.

Miss B—We'll like you just as well.

Mr. X—Were you scared for a minute?

Miss A—Well, just for a moment.

Mis B—I ain't ever scared.

Mr. X—Well, here we are. South Station. Changa cars here.

Miss A—Thanks an awful lot.

Miss B—That was swell. Goodby.

Mr. X—Goodby.

Mr. X washed up at the office and did a good day's work. He forgot the two girls. On the way home that night he gave an elderly lady a lift.

Agent Calls

Three weeks later a representative of his insurance company called on him to inquire about "an accident in which two girl passengers were injured."

Mr. X didn't know what he was talking about at first. The insurance agent told him he had hit a tree on the Southern Artery, blown out a tire, hurt two girls. Then the light dawned on him. He told the true story. The insurance agent left satisfied that he was telling the truth.

The case developed. Both girls worked in the same factory in South Boston. They had taken his registration number. On arriving at work that morning they told of the accident. Both complained of headaches and bruises—both were sent home by their employer. Neither had since been at work.

Mr. X and the insurance fought the claim. The case dragged along for nearly two years before it went on trial before jury.

Girls' Story

The girls testified that (a) they had wanted to ride in the back seat but that Mr. X insisted they ride in front with him; (b) that he mentioned the fact he had hardly room enough to drive properly when they were all squeezed in front; (c) that he had put his right arm around Miss A against her protest just before the accident occured; (d) that he lost control of the car at that time and that the car struck a tree; (e) that they had complained of injuries to him and asked to be taken to a doctor and that he had refused; (f) that Miss B fainted; (g) that their injuries were such that they had been sent home from work and forced to remain in bed for more than two weeks.

Their employer testified for them A doctor testified for them. They had a reputable lawyer who was convinced they had been victimized. There was nobody to testify for Mr. X but Mr. X.

The verdict was $375 plus doctor's bills for Miss A and $400 plus doctor's bills for Miss B. Mr. X lost his registration temporarily for not having reported the accident and he got in wrong with his wife.

(Another fake claim will be told in tomorrow's Boston American.

Watches Son Die in Plunge

Youth Fails in Wings' Glide From Plane

By International News Service

Flint, Mich., April 1—Mrs. Leroy Davis kissed her son, Floyd, 22. She watched him strap on his body two parachutes and a bat-like wing of his own invention.

Then she watched him plunge from an airplane 5000 feet to his death.

Davis' invention was a single one-piece wing, eight feet long strapped across his back and fitted with small ailerons for flight control.

Yesterday he ascended 5000 feet in the plane of Gordon Helm, and leaped from the cockpit. Spectators, including his parents, saw him glide smoothly downward, then go into two tailspins.

On the third spin he pulled the ripcord of his first parachute. But it lines fouled the wing. Davis fluttered 1500 feet to the ground before he could release his spare parachute.

Rain Cycle to Follow Dust Storms Over Nation

By Associated Press

Seattle, April 1—Terrific dust storms may rob one state and enrich another in the Middle West, carrying clouds of dust east to darken even Atlantic coast cities, but Pacific Northwest farmers are rejoicing over a predicted "moist cycle."

"There are more definite indications of a swing to much 'wetter weather' in this area than anywhere else in the nation," said John B. Kincer, head of the climatic and crop weather service of the United States weather bureau, Washington, D. C.

"The whole country should also experience heavier rainfall in years to come.

Weather records tend to confirm their beliefs.

Severe dust storms also have swept over the interior lands of the Pacific Northwest the past month.

On a swing through the Northwest, Kincer, whose division has 5000 weather stations over the country, visited Wenatchee, on the edge of the Big Bend area, during the past week.

A believer in the theory that there are no definite changes in climate, but rather definite cycles of variation in rainfall, Kincer said that the United States has been in a descending "moisture cycle" for the past 25 years.

BRUNO WITNESS WARRANT OUT

By International News Service

Flemington, N. J., April 1—A bench warrant for the arrest of Benjamin Heier, who was a defense witness in the Hauptmann trial, was issued today by Common Pleas Judge Adam O. Robbins.

The warrant was issued when Heier failed to appear to plead to an indictment charging him with perjury in his testimony during Hauptmanns' trial for the Lindbergh baby's murder.

As a defense witness Heier testified that a man he saw climb a cemetery gate the night of April 2, 1932, was Isidor Fisch. He said he was in an automobile with Judy Schwartz near the gate of the cemetery.

The indictment charges that Heier testified falsely, maliciously and wilfully, that he was not near the cemetery that night, nor in the company of Judy Schwartz, and that he did not see a man climb the gate.

GRANDMOTHER, GIRL, 18, SLAIN

New York, April 1 (INS)—Mrs. Nora Kelly, 60, and her 18-year-old granddaughter, Florence McVey, who were found dead early today in Mrs. Kelly's apartment, were murdered, authorities disclosed this afternoon.

The murders, and the fact that both women previously had been attacked, were revealed at an autopsy soon after the mournful howls of a dog had led to discovery of the bodies.

Miss McVey was attacked and suffocated, and her body was found hanging by a piece of telephone wire from a beam inthe basement, the killer apparently hoping thus to establish a suicide theory.

Boy Scouts and CCC men may be asked to join. The hunt will be in charge of Lieutenant Harry L. Avery, commander of state police division C, in Holden.

The thin shaft of a flashlight awakened Miss Claire Creelman of Verndale street, Brookline, last night. While her mother and sister slept, she slipped out the window in her pajamas and summoned police, who captured the man.

Plane Plunges 5000 Feet to Safety

Three months after the United States declared war I was enlisted as private first-class in the aviation service of the Signal Corps. Three more months and I was one of the lucky ones ordered abroad. In Issoudun, without any previous training, we started learning to fly the Nieuports, fastest and most dangerous of war planes. We talked, dreamed flying night and day. A test pilot was killed, but his death didn't cool my love for flying. Then suddenly Beauchamp and I were ordered to report to the First Pursuit Group. I was assigned to a beautiful new plane, a Spad. I saw a German pilot captured. Ordered out to fly low and fire into the enemy's trenches, my friend, Beauchamp, was killed. The next day protecting an observation plane, my plane was hit.

"Damn you!" . . . and as I frantically looked for the source a Fokker, streaking past, dove on the observation plane. No time to pick and choose so, diving on him I pulled both triggers. Speeding by the Salmson he continued diving so I, with both guns spitting lead into his plane, followed.

Rat-tat-tat-tat-tat . . . tracer bullets passed me on both sides.

Three Fokkers

Phwit—phwit—phwit — "You're a good shot . . . but you haven't got me yet."

Phwit—phwit—phwit — "Damn you." I looked back. Fokkers—three of them—were diving on me.

Three! Good Lord! The bullets came thick and fast, grazing, hitting, missing. No wonder . . . with three of them. The plane ahead had disappeared but those behind were pouring lead at me.

"Three to one are you? Think you'll get me do you? Try it!" and I pushed on the stick . . .

My plane dropped. Plunging forward, completely out of the seat, I thought I was thrown out, but the straps held and my ship fell—like a rock.

Down, down, the wind screeched through the rigging.

"Come on now! Come on!" . . . Could any plane stand this terrific strain? "We'll see this out together, shall we? . . . we'll outdive them, eh?"—and down I went until the altimeter indicated three thousand feet.

I had dropped five thousand so pulled up and looked around. Not a plane in sight.

The air was clear and the Fokkers far behind. Momentarily lost, headed in the general direction home.

Bullet Holes

CRACK! CRACK! Anti-aircraft warned me that the lines were very near, but it seemed so mild in comparison that I held a straight course.

The Marne! What a wonderful sight. Threading its paleness through familiar landmarks.

The mechanics rushed over and ran alongside my machine.

"Is Buckley back?" I asked.

"Yes, Lieutenant . . . yes, he's back. We've heard all about your fight but we knew you'd come home all right," and almost tenderly they touched the plane and steadied it up to the hangar.

Instinctively knowing that I did not want to talk they busied themselves with the plane, counting the bullet holes and whispering, excitedly, together.

"Last Fight"

Buckley was waiting in the operation tent.

"Well, what did you think of that meet?" I asked.

Before Chateau Thierry, Buckley had fought on the Toul sector and was a skilful pilot with several enemy victories to his credit.

"I thought it was my last fight," he said, "It's a wonder we both got back alive. Where's the observation plane?"

"Search me. I passed it when diving on a Fokker."

The telephone rang.

"It's a message from the observation squadron," whispered the operator, and we listened to his one-sided conversation.

"Yes . . . yes, all back. Oh, is that so? What! you would have . . . yes, yes, all right."

Swinging around he said, "Their rudder was badly damaged and the observer shot through the arm. Wanted to know if you both got back. Said they saw one Spad diving straight down with three Fokkers on its tail."

Further reports were that the Salmson pilot boasted he would have gone back except for a disabled rudder.

"He'll go alone next time," snapped Captain Peterson, who knew no pictures had been taken and the entire flight was a hideous travesty.

Commandant Gerard of the VI Armee sent the following telegram:

The Commandant of the VI Armee aeronautique addresses his thanks and his congratulations to the First Pursuit Group for the efficiency of the protection given about II H 00 on the photographic mission of the Second G.A. He asks the commander of the 1st Pursuit to let him know if all planes which were in the combat in the region of Fereen-Tardenois have returned.

Line Advances

Later we heard to our satisfaction I must admit, that the pilot of the Salmson was not only severely criticized for the maniacal combat he forced us into but was never again allowed to fly at the front.

Orders were posted for a patrol over the region Serge-Cierges. The front line was moving steadily north and Fere-en-Tardenois, twelve miles northwest of Chateau Thierry had just been captured by the Allies.

Our formation of five planes had patrolled for nearly two hours when the leader signaled to start for home.

My motor was skipping and despite constant efforts at readjustment became worse and suddenly stopped. Although over the lines my altimeter registered 15,000 feet so I had plenty of time to decide on a landing spot.

The instant I picked a second Spad left formation and in a wide circle was gliding down. Hurriedly scanning the sky for Huns, then for a place to land.

Emergency Landing

I saw a small field. Although pitted with shell holes it was the only feasible spot.

Below was Fere-en-Tardenois, the field was west; without a doubt it was Allied territory. I landed and almost simultaneously, ahead and about 50 feet away, the other Spad came to a stop. There, grinning, sat Buckley.

"What's your trouble?"

"Same as your, I guess," he answered. "Motor stopped just as we started for home."

He suggested we go to Fere-en-Tardenois and send word to the squadron. Mechanics. We climbed out.

Two large shell holes, approximately 10 feet across and four feet deep, were just in front of our wheels.

"We sure picked a pretty place . . ."

"Yes . . . so safe!"

Shell holes blanketed the field. Had either plane gone a few feet further it would have crashed. Marveling at our luck we took a road to the town.

Eerie Music

Fere-en-Tardenois was but a name. Piles of twisted masonry, waste and desolation proved the demolishing accuracy of our artillery fire. Not a building was left intact, not a spot undefiled.

We picked our way through the wreckage.

A piano. Soft notes . . . clear notes . . . sweet. We listened. Pelleas and Melisande sang of their love, not in a cool, green garden but here in a dead, grey city. The music stopped. Should we go on? Would he sing and play again?

The debris crunched under our boots . . . there . . . wait . . . familiar notes filled the air. The voice began . . .

Quand Madelon vient nous servir a boire
Sous la-tonnelle on frole son jupon
. . . . . .
MADELON — MADELON — MADELON.

Climbing over a pile of stone and brick we saw him. A lone French soldier—playing.

A dilapidated piano—still—was perched precariously where a shell had blown it.

The soldier's right leg was gone and his crutch, stuck into the refuse, trembled as he fervidly played and sang. So concentrated were his efforts that he did not hear us.

A place to sleep and word to the squadron were our next concern.

An American, on a motorcycle, told us of a Field Hospital near by and offered us a ride. We squeezed into the side car and in a few moments stopped on a flat field dotted with tents.

Medical officers, standing near, were most cordial and, before we asked, invited us to spend the night. We sent word in our squadron and sat down to dinner.

Too High

Their interest in aviation was unbounded. During the meal and for two hours after they talked solely of flying.

Countless questions, sensible and inconsistent, all concerned flights over the lines. They told us of watching air battles, of their admiration for men who flew and said they saw Buckley and me circle and land.

They seemed thrilled to have with them, in the flesh, aviators they had seen in the air. But, to talk flying with those who knew little about it was difficult. To be treated as heroes was embarrassing.

"About fifteen thousand feet," Buckley answered.

A deep sigh shook his head. "Maybe you kids like it, but that's too high for me. That's a long way to fall . . . how about you, Collins?"

Collins, a southerner, lazily looked at Buckley, then at me and drawled, "You all must carry God right in your vest pocket."

War Wreckage

Later.

Two headlights, dimly glowing, shine over a low hill. Two more. Two more. Two more, until a dotted line of light, like a mile-long ochre serpent, winds, twists, creeps, slowly but steadily, towards us.

A solemn procession, it plies its way in and around the curving road with a cargo of suffering humans. American youths, once vigorous, healthy and spirited, now but waste material, sent to be reclaimed and, if possible, to be sent back to fill the holes constantly rent in a living wall of defense blocking the enemy's advance through France.

Empty tents, with open flaps. The train stops. Four stretchers, a motionless figure on each, are pulled from racks in the rear of the ambulance, placed on the ground, quickly picked up by orderlies and carried into a tent.

One tent is full. The ambulances move to the next, the next and the next until all of the half-dead mortals are discharged.

Mustard Gas

A doctor motions to us. Following we enter a tent. Foul, nauseating, pungent odors fill our nostrils.

The stench makes breathing difficult. Gassed men, lying on cots which rest on the bare earth, are a carpet of misery.

Conscious, half-conscious, dying, they moan and screech in agony.

Fighting to free himself he yells, "For Christ's sake, let me go. Let me go I say . . . they can't kill me budgy and get away with it. You damned dirty Boche . . . I'll get you . . . you . . .". He collapses. Limp.

Uniforms are replaced by soft, flannel coats and pants. A tag around each man's neck gives his name and outfit.

The nurses can work only by spells. The terrible odor is so vitiating that, to regain strength, they must go into the fresh air every few minutes.

"What causes this awful odor?" I asked the doctor.

"Mustard gas." He shakes his head hopelessly.

"Is there nothing you can do to relieve them?"

"Very little."

But there must be something some way to help. Maybe I could think. Must we, well and strong, stand by and allow this torture?

The smell, we can stand no more. Buckley and I walk out and are shown a tent for the night. The horrible sounds. The moans of suffering.

I want to get up and run away. And these doctors think we are wonderful because we fly. They are crazy.

God! that shriek, maybe he's dying; better perhaps if he does.

Bird's Silent Music

By Hiram Percy Maxim

Most of us are stone deaf to sounds above 18,000 vibrations per second. Just why our hearing should have been shut off at this boundary is a mystery bound up in the past.

The human eye also has its limitations. What made it blind below the red and above the violet? Beyond these limits there are countless unseen and unnamed colors.

In summer a pair of humming birds nest near my house. Every now and again one of them alights on our telephone wire. When the male sings I can hear only parts of his song.

Misses High Notes

I believe he is singing steadily because his back and throat move; but I cannot hear his high notes, and I am sorry, for he has a sweet song.

His vocal cords are so small and light that many of the sounds he makes have a frequency above audibility.

Many times have I wondered what his song might be, and whether it might not be worth recording.

Professor George W. Pierce and Miss Jane Prouty of Harvard University, I discovered, wondered also, and they have investigated the subject. The problem was a difficult one, as may be imagined.

They took advantage of the knowledge that certain crystals, when properly cut, vibrate at certain definite frequencies.

For example, a given quartz crystal will vibrate at just one particular frequency.

A given Rochelle salt crystal will vibrate at many different frequencies. Both will generate a feeble oscillating current of electricity when they vibrate.

A sound collecting horn was set up and a thin Rochelle salt crystal was placed at the small end between metal plates.

Any sound within the vibrating limits of the crystal generated an electrical current having a frequency identical with that of the sound. By means of vacuum tubes this current was amplified.

Study in Sound

However, notwithstanding this amplification, the current could produce no sound that the human ear could hear in a telephone receiver, any more than the original sound of the bird's singing could be heard.

The latter was above audibility, and any reproduction of it would also be above audibility.

To bring the frequency down where it would be inside the range of the human ear, an expedient used in radio reception was utilized. It is called "heterodyning."

It amounts to setting up another and separate sound of similar loudness, but slightly different frequency from the one under investigation.

These two sounds, not being of the same frequency, get in and out of step with each other. When they are in step, they add together and make a louder sound.

When they are exactly one half out of step, they neutralize each other and produce no sound at all.

Song Made Audible

Since they give a louder sound only when in step, and also since they fall into step at relatively long intervals, a lower frequency of these louder sounds is given off, and, this being considerably lower, is audible.

The song of the humming bird may then be listened to, but at a lower pitch than natural.

Other small creatures have had their voices made audible to human ears. Among these are various kinds of crickets, katydids, ants and beetles.

In these very small creatures the song is not musical. It is not sung, but is a sound created by the scratching of wings or legs or feelers together.

These members are made rough, so that an extremely high frequency squeak is created when they are rubbed against each other.

It is the male which makes the noises. He scratches and squeaks until his program appeals to the females and leads her to approach.

The females appear to have no sound producing organs.

There is every reason to believe that a whole world of sound exists of which we humans are entirely ignorant.

The song of the humming bird is just on the boundary of human audibility.

There probably are thousands of tiny creatures which sing and make curious noises which are far higher in frequency than the humming bird giving to the forest an entirely different character than we dream.

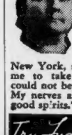
HER QUIVERING NERVES



A woman's nerves often get the best of her. Here is a medicine that quiets quivering nerves, makes you sleep better, gives you the extra energy you need.

Mrs. Grace Benjamin of Breesport, New York, says, "My mother told me to take your Compound. I could not be on my feet without it. My nerves are better and I am in good spirits."

NEARLY DUMB FROM 5 YEARS IN WILDS

By Associated Press

Edmonton, Alta., April 1—Silent, almost dumb, and hard of hearing after five years in the fastness of the Far North, Andrew Bahr, 70-year-old reindeer herder, returned to this outpost of civilization like a "man from another world."

At the Edmonton Airport yesterday Andy stepped out of an airplane, and for the first time since he started a trek across Alaska with a reindeer herd for the hungry Eskimos, Andy saw a city—a white man's modern city.

The little, stooped man had completed the task of driving about 3000 reindeer 1800 miles along the ice-ribbed Arctic coast to the new reindeer reserve east of the Mackenzie delta, established by Canada for its impoverished natives.

He was met at the airport by his lawyer, Edward D. Phelan, of Seattle, newspapermen and photographers.

He spoke not a word of greeting to anyone. It was as if the words spoken by those around him were in a strange tongue.

Phelan handed him a letter.

"This is from your wife, Andy," said Phelan.

His broad face, burned red-brown by searing winds and the glare of the sun, broke into a smile as cameras clicked.

Phelan whiskew him away in an automobile—Andy's first auto ride in five years—to a hotel. What he thought of developments since he "left the world," he did not say.

DOUBLE QUOTA For C. M. T. C. Here

Twice as many young men as have been trained in New England camps in other years will trek to the New England Citizens' Military Training camps this year, according to an announcement by Major General Fox Conner, commanding general of the First Corps Area.

The quota for New England will be 2300 this year, which is double the number alloted to New England in 1933 and 19344.

APRIL FOOL 'Candy' for Rats

New York, April 1 (US)—Leading the list of those to be fooled today are about four million rats on Rikers Island in the East River.

Irving Billing, "Pied Piper" hired by the city to rid the island of rodents, sallied forth early today, with a "feast" for the rats.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour but two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food don't digest. It just decays in your bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul. A skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Insist on Little Liver Pills at drug stores. 25¢ at drug stores. ©1935 C. M. Co.

PRESIDENT HAS BUSY DAY

By Associated Press

Miami, April 1 — Tanned by Southern sunshine and breezes, President Roosevelt went to work today on an accumulation of mail and some business arriving from Washington.

Two naval seaplanes carried pouches to him off Crooked Island on the curve back homeward from the trip through the deep Bahama group.

On his sixth day out of the Capital, the President found only one minor bill from Congress to be signed but a big stack of mail and reports.

The yacht Nourmahal carrying the President, srailed by the destroyer Farragut, anchored off Crooked Island yesterday, and, in the words of Mr. Roosevelt, "all hands went ashore to Sandy Beach this afternoon for sun bath and swim."

S. S. HOLMES Dies in Jersey

Maplewood, N. J., April 1 (AP)—Stanley S. Holmes, 54, chairman of the New Jersey state housing authority, died suddenly of a heart attack in hose home here.

Holmes was vice-president of the Western Electric Corporation, in charge of the Kearny plant. He was born in Plymouth, Mass.

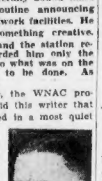
KNOX MANNING IN NEW RADIO ROLE

By N. F. T.

It required a substantial measure of stamina to do what Knox Manning did a week or ten days ago. Knox, if it need be set forth, is probably as well known by name and voice as any "mike" man who works with words in these parts.

He jacked up his job, with no better or worse employment to assume. Folks aplenty could call that foolhardy, unless they knew Knox Manning. He decided he was in a rut, literally bound hand and foot, to routine announcing over Yankee Network facilities. He wanted to do something creative. Still the hours and the station requirements afforded him only the opportunity to do what was on the studio schedule to be done. As stated, he quit.

Linus Travers, the WNAC production head, told this writer that Manning resigned in a most quiet and orderly manner. In fact, they couldn't persuade him from his newborn firmness of purpose. In any event, and for the sake of concluding this report of what happened, he sold himself to a sponsor as a commentator. He starts today with a six-day a week quarter hour (WNAC) between 10:45 and 11 mornings.



"N. F. T."

Oh, yes, he will receive practically twice the pay he collected as a weekly stipend while on the staff. Not bad, Knox. However, what developed is precisely what your Uncle N. F. T. had an ingrowing hunch would come to pass in the light of his abilities, program personality and determination.

STORY STARTS

There's a new feature getting under way in Boston this evening (WHDH) from 7:45 until 8 o'clock. Catching an earful of the sketch in a special presentation for the press on Friday last, methinks it should be recommended to the loudspeaker patrons hereabouts. They call it "Peaceful Haven" and it has to do with life in a typical New England fishing village. It is authored and staged by one George Brown, who appears to have demonstrated a marked flare for putting things on paper for broadcasting in a most appealing and arresting fashion. His new and sponsored "Peaceful Haven" should certainly win a way. If New York program planners perchance hear it, the old home town may be soon bidding George good-bye and good luck.

Because of conflicting operatic engagements, the swell singers featured (WNAC) in the three weekly programs with Andre Kostelanetz and his orchestra and ensemble, have exchanged program dates for this week.

Under the revised schedule, Lily Pons will be heard from 9:00 to 9:30 p. m. tonight.

Richard Bonelli and Lucrezia Bori will sing at the same time Wednesday and Saturday, respectively. They will resume their regular schedule next week, Miss Bori on Monday, Miss Pons on Wednesday, and Bonelli on Saturday.

TIMELY TURN

Morgan L. Eastman and his merry music men will have fun on the "Contented Hour," this evening (WEEI) at 10 o'clock. They introduce their "April Fool's Rhapsody" especially arranged by Carleton Colby.

Almost anything can happen in it and probably will, explains Maestro Eastman in describing the fantastic whimsicality.

BEACH SOUGHT FOR EVERETT

Movement for construction of a beach and bathhouse by the Malden river in Everett was revived today when Councilman Frederick L. Galbraith entered an order in council for authority to the city of Everett supplying the materials. He said:

"Last year the Legislature passed a bill voted by Governor Ely, because a few industrial plants along the river dump oil and other materials into the water.

"I intend to appeal to the State Department of Public Health to stop the practise of dumping this obnoxious material into the river,

Don't Allow Trivialities To Wreck Marriage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HOW little young, engaged couples realize during the days of their courtship—when everything is moonlight, roses and glamour—that the trivialities of daily life, little annoying habits, stupid prejudices, may get on each other's nerves more than the far more serious things.

The mere fact that one wishes to sleep with windows wide open, and the other disapproves of night air; that one loves to read in bed and the other likes to go to sleep immediately—may be a very serious bone of contention.

One's upbringing plays an important part in these matters; each has been influenced by his or her parents, their mothers in particular, and each thinks his or her own way the only right one.

One thinks tidiness a vital matter, and the other thinks that it impairs comfort; one hates to be a slave of time and the other cannot exist without punctuality. All these are necessary re-adjustments which good sense and time will bring about.

Each must be prepared to give in a little, and compromises must be reached.

Do not allow these trifles to spoil the perfect marriage which can be yours, if only you will meet each other half way.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My wife has been bread-winner in our family for nearly four years. We were both widowed when we were married six years ago, and were perfectly happy until she began to resent references to my first wife. When I'd come home, she would run to meet me and throw her arms around my neck; now she's different.

I backed up my folks when they told her she wasn't a patch to my first wife, who was a walking saint. After they had gone, she said: "Do you realize that by your and their actions something beautiful has been taken out of my life?" And she has been different ever since.

Although I think I'm right and my folks are right, I'd like my wife to act as she used to.

HOPEFUL HUSBAND

I must confess to being in sympathy with this second wife of yours, who has been the family bread-winner for four years and who has been told by you and your family that she isn't a patch on your first wife. Under the circumstances, I think you were very untactful to remind her that your first wife was a "walking saint."

Your second wife, being a working saint, naturally resents this, and I think it's up to you to win back her old regard for you.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm 18 and a senior in high school. I love a certain girl and have loved her ever since she entered our classes. Please tell me how I can show her how much I like her. I'm afraid to ask her to go to any of the senior activities, because I believe she will turn me down. JAMES.

Suppose she does turn you down—try again. Those men who succeed are those who will not take "no" for an answer, either in love or seeking better business opportunities. Brace up, James!

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I met him at a Christmas party held by my mother's lodge. He was playing an accordion so the people could dance. I asked him to play a favorite song. He r.id he didn't know it, but would play any other song for me. He played for me, and then we had quite a talk together.

Before we say goodbye, he gave me his name, address and telephone number, and asked me to call him. Would it be all right if I called him up some time?

SADIE.

By all means, invite the young man to call. Nothing could be more conventional than meeting him through your mother's lodge.

A GARDEN LILY POOL

TROPICAL LILIES NEED LITTLE CARE

Perhaps you've had occasion to exlaim, "Really, my garden is so hot and the soil bakes so hard, I just can't keep flowers blooming in summer!"

If so, plant water-lilies, and for sheer loveliness select the tropical variety shown in the photograph.

If you haven't a lily pool, you'll find it easy to build a broad, shallow pool placed where the sun is hottest. For tropical water-lilies, put just a few inches of rich soil into the pool. You can get it from your plant dealer. Then put in your lily plants, cover them with a few inches of water—and you're set for the summer! No cultivation needed. No weeding needed. Just a pail of water now and then (to make up what evaporates) and soon there'll be handsome blossoms over the whole surface of the pool! Remember that the tropical variety likes plenty of surface space over which to spread, but requires only enough depth to float its magnificent leaves.

Have you some other planting problem? Or a longing to have more flowers this summer than ever before? Now is not a minute too soon to plan all this beauty! Our practical Home Institute booklet GARDENING MADE EASY, will smooth every step of the way. Here are a few of the chapters in this 32-page, illustrated booklet:

Pineapple JUICE ON Steak

By MARTHA LEE
From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

Some of the fruits that come in tins, such as pineapple, we prefer to the fresh fruits.

This is probably true because the tree-ripened fruit, which is canned as soon as it is taken from the tree is sweeter and more tender than the fresh fruits on the markets here.

Besides the sliced and crushed, pineapple now comes in a new form—the unsweetened, natural pineapple juice.

It is vacuum packed so that it retains the natural flavor of the fresh pineapple. The fruit is valuable for its minerals and vitamins and has an alkaline reaction in the body to counteract the acid-forming foods.

This fruit juice can be used not only in desserts, puddings, canapes, jellies, etc., but as a food ingredient to baste meats such as ham, chicken or beef.

Many excellent foreign dishes combine pineapple with rice and shrimp and curry and with vegetables such as cabbage, tomatoes or peas to make their native dishes.

DEVILED STEAK
(Six servings)
1 flanked steak
1 large onion
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon mixed dry herbs, if desired
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1½ tablespoons cider vinegar
2 cups pineapple juice

Melt the butter in Dutch oven and brown the sliced onions and powdered herbs, remove onion and brown the steak, which has been cut into pieces 2 by 3 inches and rolled in flour. Add remaining flour, brown slightly, then seasonings and hot pineapple juice. Cover closely and simmer for several hours, or until steak is tender.

PINEAPPLE TAPIOCA WHIP
1½ cups pineapple juice
2 tablespoons minute tapioca
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
2 egg yolks
½ cup whipping cream
3 tablespoons granulated sugar

Bring pineapple juice to a boil, add tapioca and cook slowly until done, then mix sugar with eggs. Combine two mixtures, cook for a few minutes on fire, cool and add the vanilla, stirring it once in a while. When cool, fold in the whipped cream and pour into glasses. Chill before serving.

HUGH PREPARES TO FOLLOW BOYS

CHAPTER 307

I CANNOT describe the feeling that went over me as I saw the tumbled bed clothing and the two empty cots in the bungalow.

How long after the older boys had left had the younger ones followed them?

"Hugh!" I said faintly, and, though he was in the next room, he was at my side almost instantly.

"What is it?" he said, his strong hands closing firmly over my shaking fingers.

"Hank and Bill went first. You know—you saw the tracks. Do you suppose Junior and Roderick followed right after them, or were they a long way behind them? If they weren't close to them—anything may have happened."

"And nothing at all did." Hugh spoke with such cheery conviction that it was almost impossible to doubt his promise. But I was too nervously tense to be reassured about anything.

"I can't stop here," I cried. "I must follow those bicycle tracks and see where they lead."

"And so you shall." Hugh promised soothingly. "But you are not fit to walk. I'll drive you in Bob's roadster—it's handy—and you'll have a chance to watch Jim and Katie at work. You won't miss a thing, and the first time the tracks turn, we'll turn too. How's that?"

MADGE IS RELIEVED

"I'll do whatever you say," I told him, turning to the door. "Have you found any trace of the boys here or where they might have gone?"

"They are not in the bungalow, that is certain," Hugh replied, as he caught step with me. "And the only thing I found which looks anything like a clue is this."

"Do you realize that we decided the signals Mother Graham saw must have come from the bungalow?" I asked.

"Yes, and the window where I found this is the only one from which the signals could have come, if your mother-in-law described them correctly."

"Oh! I am sure she did," I said hastily. "She is always accurate."

"Yes, I am sure she would be," he returned. But I had a queer little feeling that he was simply talking against time.

We had reached the porch of the bungalow as he spoke, and he closed the door after him, and then, putting his hand beneath my elbow again, steered me to Bob's runabout, which was the car nearest the road.

"Keys right in it," he said as we reached it. "Those youngsters never think of taking them out, but this time I approve their carelessness."

"Oh! Look!" I exclaimed, pointing to the figures of Jim and Katie, now rapidly receding down the road. "They are going toward Bridgehampton, not Sag Harbor, and the next turn is only a few feet away. We must hurry."

"Foolish child!" Hugh smiled, at me tenderly. "Do you think we shall not be able to catch up to them, if they are on foot, and we are in a car?"

The tone more than the words was like a sudden douche of cold water, although I knew Hugh meant it for anything but that. It was suddenly borne in upon me, however, that my frayed nerves and my terror formed no excuse for my acting like the babyish, helpless women whom I have often despised.

I realized something else, also, and my face flamed at the realization. This helpless dependence of mine was directly encouraging Hugh to a tenderness he would not have shown if I had been my usual self.

Waistline Is Normal

Josephine Culbertson
Opportunity Overlooked

A very interesting hand was recently submitted to me by Louis H. Watson of New York City.

As the hand was actually played, South, the declarer, was the hero and succeeded in fulfilling his three no-trump contract on a squeeze.

However, had East been as astute a player as South, he could have insured the defeat of the contract as early as trick 2 by making an entry-killing play even though the play appeared slightly dangerous.

South, Dealer.

	♠ A 9 5 ♡ 9 5 2 ◇ K J 10 6 4 ♣ 7 3
♠ J 8 6 3 ♡ K 10 6 3 ◇ 9 5 3 ♣ Q J	West / North / East / South	♠ K 10 4 ♡ A 7 4 ◇ A 8 2 ♣ 10 9 8 5
	♠ Q 7 2 ♡ Q J 8 ◇ Q 7 ♣ A K 6 4 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♢	Pass
1 NT	Pass	2 NT (1)	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) Slightly optimistic. Two diamonds would probably be a better call.

West made his normal opening of the fourth best heart, and East won the trick with the Ace and continued the suit.

Lacking a side entry in his hand, allowed declarer's Jack to hold the trick, so his partner would subsequently have a card of the suit to lead to him.

South now tackled diamonds, and East won the third round of this suit, returning a heart. East cashed his two heart tricks, giving the defense four tricks in all, and shifted to a low spade.

South was able to realize this lead was certainly not away from the King, but he still had a chance to make the hand by a squeeze.

He went up with the spade Ace in dummy and proceeded to run the two remaining diamonds. East, of course, could do nothing about it. He was unable to keep both the spade King and a club stopper with declarer discarding after him.

He finally gave up the ghost by throwing the spade King, hoping his partner held the Queen.

East at trick 2 could have defeated the contract by laying down the spade King after capturing the opening lead with his heart Ace.

This lead, if won by dummy's Ace, would have removed the only entry for the running of the diamond suit, and the declarer would never have been able to find enough tricks to make three notrump.

If the declarer, as a counter-move, did not capture the lead of the spade King with the Ace, East could have shifted to hearts with the same play subsequently developing as actually happened.

The defense would then have taken three heart tricks and a spade, in addition to their diamond Ace, and South would have gone down one.

HIGH SCHOOL TRAGEDY

By Maxine Canty

Mrs. Sardoni Tells Story

CHAPTER XIII

Bruce's story made a great impression on me. I thought about it a lot during the days he was at the house, and it was coming out in our conversations, bit by bit.

I wish I could put into words the gaiety, the beauty, the delicacy of the first weeks of his and Connie's romance as he made us feel them.

It made us all sadder to know that intimate side of Connie Sinclair, to realize the tragedy of her death more fully . . . She must have had a sweet, resilient (I think that is what Dad called it), merry personality, more so even than we kids at school ever felt.

Bruce's character puzzled us all somewhat. He was everything a girl could wish a lover to be, and yet it did seem that Connie had got a bad deal. Just why he had the sudden change of heart after she came to St. Joseph, was hard to understand.

It seemed to have been a genuine struggle on his part, and a deep conviction that he was doing the right thing in breaking it off. I felt rather sad that they couldn't make a go of it, Allen frankly hated him.

Nothing more came up that the police could keep him for any longer, and so Bruce returned to San Francisco in a few days. The following Saturday, the Inspector called the house asking for me. I went to the phone upstairs where the family couldn't disturb me.

"Hello."

"Miss Julie?"

"Yes."

Julie on Job

"Inspector O'Brien. There is some testimony coming up that will interest you. If you have time, you might come down. You like dictation, don't you?"

"A little."

"Good. You can transcribe what you on. I have rather needed someone like you. About 10.30."

"I'll be there."

I was so excited I could hardly get the green knitted skirt and white sweater on straight. It would be my first time I had heard any direct questioning.

Evidently, too, it must be something O'Brien thought I could follow up later, for I realized the stenography was just an excuse for my hearing it all. I clearly understand that I, Julie Martin, was on her way to a police inspector's office to interview a suspect! I almost ran down town.

The Inspector was waiting for me.

"Good morning, Miss Julie. This is something that you will be interested in. We got the Googoo to talk last night. He will tell it over again this morning, and I want you to take it down. Neil, however, we are interviewing Mrs. Sardoni."

I was surprised to say the least. By "Googoo," the Inspector meant Hym, the word being a disrespectful slang term for Filipinos. I wondered why he would want me to hear what Hyn had to say, surely I would not be set on his trail. Mrs. Sardoni thrilled me more. That woman fascinated me.

"Now, Miss Julie, I think it would be better for you to be out of sight. How are your ears?"

"Good, sir."

"O. K. Then you sit in this closet. You see there is a mirror here which reflects this chair through the top ventilation opening. So you can see the person being questioned. Here is a chair with an arm table, pencils, and a notebook. You can hear through the perforations in the door."

"Yes, sir." Evidently this closet had been used for this purpose before. I was tingling with the suspense and the mysterious atmosphere. It was like being in a play.

Connie's Callers

So soon as I was settled, the Inspector returned to his desk. One or two other men came in, one officer, the others in plain clothes. In a short time, Mrs. Sardoni entered. She was dressed in dark red again with black furs and a small red hat. She walked quickly, gracefully, and her voice was deep.

"Good morning, Inspector," she greeted him.

He rose, waved to the other men "You know Grant, Smith, Atwater?"

She nodded to them carelessly. "Won't you sit down?"

Mrs. Sardoni relaxed into the chair arranged for her, loosened her furs, crossed her knees, and smiled pleasantly. She was really most attractive as she sat there.

"Now, Mrs. Sardoni," began the Inspector, as he, too, sat down, "we would like to go over some of the information you have given us before, and check some details we are not quite sure about. We have talked to a number of people, got a number of clues that might involve several, yet I'll have to admit frankly that the trail does not lead to any one person directly. In other words, we want to get a sort of resume of events."

"Anything I can do, Inspector—"

"Thank you."

O'Brien now took the pale green paper with Mrs. Sardoni's signature from his pocket, the paper that had so occupied my thoughts. All the motions were deliberate, almost slow. Mrs. Sardoni uncrossed her knees.

"During the afternoon and evening of October 26 you have said that Miss Sinclair had a number of callers?"

"Yes."

"The first ones were the boy and girl from the high school with whom she entered the house at about 4.30?"

"Yes. They met on the steps, I believe, as I happened to be looking out of the window at the time. They were a long time outside the door. So I opened mine as they entered to be sure they were with Miss Sinclair. You have no idea how many queer-looking peddlers and agents slip into an apartment house unless you watch all the time I slip up a step into the hall whenever I hear anyone—"

Suppresses Giggle

"I understand," interrupted the Inspector. "You saw these two students with Miss Sinclair, and you could later identify them as Julia Martin and Richard Ward?"

"I believe those were their names. I have never seen them at any other time, but from the description you gave me, I think they were the ones. The girl was small and slender with curly black hair and bluish gray eyes, quite pretty. The boy was tall, wore glasses, had mouse-colored hair, was inclined to be awkward."

"Miss Sinclair went on upstairs with them?"

"Yes."

"And when did you see her again?"

Mrs. Sardoni's fur slipped to the floor, was picked up by the officer and returned to the chair-back before she answered. When she spoke, her voice was unusually soft; I did not think she would sound so gentle

"I never saw the poor thing again."

"Did you hear her talking"?

"Yes, to Miss Sims and Miss Whelton she called good-bye when they left at a little after 7. At 8 o'clock another student, a boy, came, as I told you. His voice was quite loud, and he seemed to be reproaching and threatening her.

"I heard her say as he left, 'I shall not change my mind, Melvin.' He was very angry and he slammed the door in the vestibule so hard I thought he would break the glass."

"You can hear a great deal of what goes on upstairs from your apartment?"

"No," she shrugged, "but his voice was so loud I was alarmed and I came into the hall as he banged down the stairs."

"The time was 8.30?"

"About that."

"Tell us what else you observed that night."

"I saw no more. I returned to my apartment, wondering why a young boy should be so cross at his teacher. Then, too, I wondered at so many pupils coming to see Miss Sinclair. It seems strange. I have a son, but he does not have to go to the homes of his teachers."

"Where is your son?"

"He is at a military academy in San Rafael."

"I see. Go on, please."

Sound of Shot

"Miss Sinclair, I was saying, seemed a funny young woman. These boys came to see her, the tall dark man with the beautiful wife came—"

"That night?"

"No, the Sunday before. The wife came the week before that, and left very angry. She had so many callers, she lived alone, not like the other teachers, in twos. I wonder about it all."

"Did any other people come to see her regularly that you have not mentioned?"

"She seemed to know lots of people. I do not recall any who came what you would call regularly."

"No friends from the high school?"

"There was a very slight pause. Mrs. Sardoni seemed to be trying hard to remember. "She had no close women friends, I would say. Once in a while Miss Tyrol and another teacher whose name I did not know came to call on her."

"Men?"

"I don't remember."

"Did you ever see Mr. Perkins there?"

Mrs. Sardoni watched her own fingers pull at the tail of her fox fur as she seemed to think a moment.

"Yes, I have. He called to see her fairly often, I believe. He always left early, and I would see him as he went down the stairs."

"Was he there that night?"

"No!" she exclaimed.

"You are sure?"

She nodded.

"Now, then, Mrs. Sardoni, suppose you tell us just what you did after you saw Melvin go down the stairs."

SLENDER LINES

Cape Is Concealing

By MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9335

If you're having to watch your potatoes and desserts there days, here's a quick way to a slender appearance!

It won't make you lose weight, but it will make you look as if you had.

The cape, of course, conceals any bulges of the upper arms, and makes the hips and waist appear slim

That diagonal closing—always a flattering line—is new when combined with a cape, and smooths the bodice to reduce the effect of the bustline.

Pattern 9335 may be ordered only in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards 39 inch fabric and ¾ yard 2½ inch lace.

New Skin Clarifiers

Efficacious Blackhead Treatment

By JULIET SHELBY

ENLARGED pores and blackheads are common skin conditions with which many women must cope.

In some instances, regular skin scrubbings with a complexion brush and special medicated soap will clear the skin of these pesky blemishes; in other cases, more drastic treatment s required.

Every prominent salon has a special treatment for blackheads, and if you can afford to indulge in one or two a week until your skin has cleared, by all means do so.

But, on the other hand, if you have the patience to tackle your problem, I can tell you of two products that make an excellent basic treatment. One is a lotion that is applied twice weekly, after you have cleansed and steamed your face. The other is an ointment with which to smother your skin after you have "rolled" out some of the irritants.

This is a good time of the year to get your face in order. A new Easter bonnet adds little to your personal allure if your complexion is blemished or muddy.

And don't think that you are the only woman in the world with such a problem. Many of the Hollywood stars must keep constant watch lest they, too, develop this common condition. Glenda Farrell, candid gal that she is, confesses to an oily skin that doesn't allow many latitude in her beauty routine.

And her smooth, lovely complexion would make you think that she was one of those exceptionally fortunate women who have no skin problems whatever!

If you wish to know the name of these two products, and where they are sold, phone Liberty 4000, and ask for Miss Shelby, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Color in Tweeds

THE COLOR, rather than the weave, of the new tweeds, is the main point of interest.

The beautiful pastels in monotone are exciting, and the tweeds in two or more colors usually have a gray tone for general impression.

Tweed coats have companion skirts, in many instances.

The reefer coat holds its own, and many of the suits that have both jacket and a cape are made of tweed

Some of the coats have width above the waist, achieved with wide armholes, almost dolman. Buttons and stitching and seaming make tweeds what they are today.

The influence is seen in light weight woolens that are not tweed at all but have been knotted or twisted in such a way as to appear quite tweedy.

These suits and dresses will appeal to the woman or girl who does not want the warmth of tweed, but wants the general effect of it.

BUNNY. PATTERN 576

He is a very cute cuddly toy; his long ears will intrigue the youngsters. He is equally fetching with or without the jacket which is made to be removable. And what is more fascinating to a tot than to dress and undress toys? You can make the bunny in a plain or figured material and let the jacket be in a contrasting material. He is about 10 inches high when finished.

Pattern 576 comes to you with the pattern of the bunny and the jacket, and full directions and yardages for making them.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to Boston Evening American, Needlecraft Department, 83 Eighth avenue, New York, N. Y.

AERIAL REVIEW FEATURE FOR COAST FAIR

San Diego, April 1—Gigantic aerial maneuvers, carried out by hundreds of army and navy planes, will be spectacular features of the California Pacific International Exposition, to open at San Diego on May 20, continuing to November 11.

With the Pacific fleet making its headquarters at San Diego during the exposition period, every day will see squadrons of planes soaring overhead joined for the great mass maneuvers by flights of army fliers.

Plans are now under way for flights in which approximately 1000 military planes will take part; the greatest massed flight that San Diego has seen since the dedication of the city's airport, Lindbergh Field, named in honor of the aviator whose transatlantic plane was built in San Diego.

The presence of the fleet will make it possible for exposition visitors to inspect the nation's fighting craft, and a constant succession of shore boats will ply back and forth carrying visitors to battleships cruisers and destroyers.

CHURCH SWINDLE

Suspect Arrested

Swindle victims from Brookline Cambridge East Boston and Back Bay today thronged police headquarters to view a suspect whom police say has admitted several crimes in those districts.

According to Special Officer Roy Bates who made the arrest the man would order goods to be sent to a church and ask that change for a large bill be sent with the order. He invariably made off with both goods and change.

DIONNE HINTS BATTLE WITH GUARDIANS

By Universal Service

Callander, Ont., April 1—"I don't think there will be much harmony between myself and the other guardians."

So said "Papa" Oliva Dionne, father of the quintuplets, as he and members of his family attended the Church of the Sacred Heart here. The quintuplets have been made wards of King George V.

Dionne said he knew nothing of a new guardianship bill other than what he had read in the newspapers and that he had no official communication. He had not seen Dr. Defoe, the babies' physician, nor Welfare Minister David A. Croll, He added.

"The only change in our family life since the guardianship bill was passed is that it is harder than ever for us to see our children. The hospital is guarded so heavily I believe the police must be guarding against us—as if we would think of taking our babies away. I don't see what they want guardians for anyway."

Oliva, his wife and Ernest and Rose, their eldest children, traveled four miles over difficult roads to the church. Oliva did not converse with other men from the countryside before service began, but went in at once to the pew.

Judge Named Third Dionne Guardian

Toronto, April 1 (U8)—Judge J. A. Valin of North Bay has been appointed the third guardian for the Dionne quintuplets. Minister of Welfare David Croll announced. Judge Valin will act with Dr. A. R. Defoe and Oliva Dionne, father of the five sisters, as a board of guardians.

Girls Dodge Romancing As N. Y. Bans Balm

Albany, N. Y., April 1—A broken heart isn't worth a dime in New York State now, and from Mr., Mrs. and Miss Citizen came both cheers and moans.

"Now who'll buy me my next steak?" wailed an attractive and vivacious night club dancer.

"They tell me the governor signed the bill killing off heart balm and alienation of affection suits, and believe me I'll have my fingers crossed from now on when some guy starts talking."

"My chance for breach of promise has come and gone. I've had plenty of chances to get married and there'll be plenty more. I'm not worried."

Senator John H. McNaboe, who fathered the bill and fought for its passage by the legislature, had his ideas on the subject.

"This is the day when men come into their own," he said.

Echoing the senator's sentiments was Eugene Bernino, a waiter.

"This bill will get rid of a whole lot of gold diggers," he said.

Three women, representing a cross section of social, business and home life, took time from their duties to praise the bill.

"It is encouraging to know that the state has taken steps to stop vicious blackmail," the business woman said.

One of Albany's most prominent society women added:

"It is a very good thing if it does away with the practice of victimizing innocent men."

"I don't know anything about those things, but it's a good idea," said a young housewife.

PATRIOTS PLAN EXERCISES ON ARMY DAY

Civic, veteran, and military organizations will collaborate to provide a stirring demonstration of patriotism next Saturday and Sunday in the nation and the states.

Governor James M. Curley has proclaimed Saturday as Army Day, a day sacred in the history of the country. It is the 18th anniversary of the entry of the United States in the World War.

On Sunday, in order that the public may have a better opportunity to join in the observances, the Military Order of the World War has arranged a colorful program to be held at the Boston Arena.

Crack drill teams representing the regular army, marine corps, patriotic, and school organizations have entered a contest to be held there. The program will start at 2 p. m.

The purpose of the meeting is to teach Americans the necessity of preparedness.

Army Day will be celebrated throughout the country.

President Roosevelt, in giving the day his official blessing, said:

"The general observances of Army Day on April 6 should bring back to our minds the efforts and sacrifices of our soldiers which have been so decisive in the creation, preservation and development of this great nation; it should be an occasion for the Army to rededicate itself in the glorious heritage of service to our country both in times of peace and in times of war."

LOWER RATES For Lights Begin

First fruits of Governor Curley's drive for lower electric light rates were seen today as reduced schedules became effective in Massachusetts communities served by 45 public utility corporations.

In Boston the rate went from 7 to 6½ cents per kilowatt hour. Officials of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston declared that this represents an annual saving of $780,000 to local consumers.

AUSTEN LAKE on Boxing Kids Scrap For Medals And A. A. U. Daddies

IF THE 81 poor but amateur kid-boxers, who are going to hammer each other about the skull, liver and heart at the Boston Arena tonight, were given their druthers in the matter, they would all choose to be rich and professional, which, to the kids' simple sight, are one and the same.

Austen Lake

The kid boxers do not make any profit out of their floggings and will battle like wild cats for a cheap, gilt medal which the thrifty A. A. U. Fathers buy for $1.20 wholesale.

And the kids pay their own training expenses, which are little more than nothing, because they train in basement, storeroom and cave-of-the-wind gymnasium that are rich in stout smells but poor in hygiene.

There are no pitchers of milk, fresh from the cow, on the kids' training tables. There is no cow. No juicy beefsteaks, no stable of flop-eared sparring partners, no gaping mob to see the gladiators bust each other in practice, no process servers sent by vocational sweethearts, no swarm of cadgers and grifters asking for money tokens.

No! The kid amateurs just sprout up as scrawny weeds, hoping to polish their clumsy swipes and climb to the top of their class.

And then some night, maybe tonight, who knows? A stout, florid party with a smart angle will sidle up and wheese, "Wot say Slugger? You and Me can make big dough?"

Few of the graduates ever get much out of this, except thickened cartilage about the eyes, ears and nose and a sour regard for society. Which the A. A. U. Fathers and their bagmen know full well.

But there is money in this and the Fathers rake it in, none of which ever goes toward making the kids' amateur life a little less sordid, a trifle less smelly and a bit more hygienic.

Farrell Completes the Cycle

EDDIE FARRELL, WHOM THE Red Sox have just signed as infield insurance, is a blocky, black-haired villager from Johnson City, Pa., who in 1925 popped up from the Pennsylvania varsity to the Giants.

He could see no daylight with Travis Jackson between him and the shortstop job, so McGraw sold him to the Braves in 1927, at a time when he was hitting about .410.

But Eddie, who is a dentist in spare time with a license to hurt people, had been swinging with his eyes closed and, when he joined the Braves, he made the mistake of opening them, with the result that his sight-hitting was about half as good as his guess-hitting.

So after a while, in 1929, McGraw took him back, and, finding him pretty mildewed, shipped to the Cubs. By 1930 he was a Yankee, and spent most of his time in the murky dugouts, once in a while coming up for a breath of air.

It was a career that started at the top and, though it did not quite come off, has miraculously remained at the top with Eddie not good enough to land a regular job but not bad enough to settle down through the sediment of the minor leagues.

Dearest to Helen's Heart

AFTER DECLARING A WHILE back that she would not sweat her reputation by returning to tournament tennis, and after mending the crick in her back, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody has exercised a woman's prerogative by announcing that she will try to regain her lost yardage next summer.

It may be, while convalescing, that "Queen Helen," who by now is just one of the common tennis people, had many a pang from the memory of that September afternoon in 1933, when she handed in her resignation and walked off the Forest Hills court, suffering from what the loud speaker said was a "subacute fifth lumbar vertebra symptoms."

The pangs, of course, came, not so much from the pretty lady's decision to retire when the fun ceased and her back ache began. But from the unkind cuts of female contemporaries and the press, who would have had her plug on to the very death, or at least at the risk of permanent injury.

Pre-view of League Races

I THINK, IF I HAD WISHED to be facetious last year in the Springtime poll of the major league experts I would have picked Detroit to win the American League and the Phillies in the National. The Phillies ran true to form, but Detroit crossed up the probabilities.

The baseball expert, unfortunately, cannot candidly keep his character of a plain journalist, but must be an apologist, home-town rooter and free lance manager, who picks his own team to win.

And when they do not win, he must print that they did not get the breaks, predict that tomorrow is another day, insist that he is not welching on the boys and finish with a varsity pep speech to the townspeople and team.

So friends, here are my seasonal guesses as to how the standing in the two leagues will finish next October.

If, next October, they do not finish this way, you will hear no more. But if they should, with fair allowance for error, I will exhume them from the files and tell you what kind of ultra-scientific deductions dictated these selections.

American League—1, Yankees; 2, Cleveland; 3, Detroit; 4, Red Sox; 5, Senators; 6, Athletics; 7, Browns; 8, White Sox.

National League—1, Giants; 2, Cardinals; 3, Cubs; 4, Brooklyn; 5, Braves; 6, Pirates; 7, Cincinnati; 8, Phillies.

BUHLER, RODMAN 6-Day Leaders

Buffalo, N. Y., April 1 (AP)—Ernest Buhler of Switzerland and Jerry Rodman of Chicago led the way into the second day of Buffalo's six-day bike race today as riding was resumed after almost constant jamming for positions opening night.

The favorites, Alf Letourner and Franco Georgetti, were in a five-team tie for fourth place.

GROVE-CRONIN HEADACHE

Out the Window?

$375,000 for Grove, Cronin

$375,000

INVESTED BY YAWKEY IN GAMBLE

By Sam Cohen

So he took the $375,000 and bought a couple of broken down ball players.

It's a cruel joke if it's true. We sincerely hope it isn't.

But in all indications it appears as if Tom Yawkey, millionaire owner of the Red Sox, cut a healthy share off his bankroll and wound up with a couple of stiffs—Lefty Grove and Joe Cronin, the difference between a world championship club and an also ran only a couple of years ago.

They jumped on Connie Mack after Grove cracked up last year and said the white haired grand daddy of baseball pulled a fast one—but that's not true. Had Mack known Grove's arm was shot he would have warned the Red Sox.

Now Joe Cronin's wrist has cracked up, the same one he splintered last Labor Day.

OUT FOR WEEK

Cronin injured his wrist in the game between the Red Sox and the Phillies in the Southland last Saturday. Just how serious the damage is has not been determined as yet, but Cronin will be on the shelf for a week.

It is not easy for anybody, even a person of Yawkey's wealth, to lose $250,000 away on a gamble, for it was just this when Yawkey bought Cronin.

He knew Cronin had fractured his wrist last year. But he gambled this small fortune in hopes of bringing a pennant winner here.

Such wasn't the case, however, with Grove. When his arm went bad, it came as a direct shock to everybody.

Lefty, himself, is convinced his trouble was mostly mental and after a test in which he allowed the Phillies but one hit in four innings, he says he is ready to take his regular turn on the mound and whip the Red Sox home to a pennant.

Let's hope so.

It is Boston's headache as well as Yawkey's. Were both Cronin and Grove to fall down, Boston's long cherished dream of a pennant would vanish into thin air.

JOE CRONIN LEFTY GROVE

A $375,000 headache! Tom Yawkey has plenty of worrying to do over his fabulous investments to bring a pennant winner to Boston. He paid $250,000 (a record sum) for Joe Cronin, new manager and shortstop of the Red Sox, and $125,000 for Lefty Grove, ace hurler. Now Cronin has injured the same wrist he fractured last Labor Day, while 'tis still doubtful whether Grove's wing is healed.

SOX DOWN IN MOUTH

Mallon Is Standout Brave

By Bill Grimes

Sarasota, Fla., April 1—According to no less an authority on conditioning ball clubs than Dennie Carroll, the Detroit trainer, there is not a team which has been training in any part of this state for five weeks that is not "down."

The Red Sox are no exception. Since arriving here, they have had only two off days.

They have been working out daily under a blistering sun. In addition bus rides to Miami, Palm Beach, Fort Myers, Bradenton, Clearwater, St. Petersburg, Tampa, Winter Haven and Lakeland . . . totalling almost 1200 miles have taken their toll on the players.

Apparently bus rides are not conductive to victories as far as the Sox are concerned. They have lost every game they have entered after jouncing over these roads.

After they were shut out by the Detroit Tigers, Manager Joe Cronin declared his club was well filled up on bus traveling and games in this terrific heat.

He believes that just as soon as the Sox hit a little cool weather they will begin to receive the benefits of this southern training trip.

Other than that Cronin and Roy Johnson are here de combat with minor ailments, the Sox are in excellent physical condition. The pitchers are rounding into form, and the club will start to hit immediately it gets out from under this glaring sky line.

Manager Cronin had his injured wrist X-rayed, and neither plate showed the slightest indication that anything was broken. However, he will not get back into action for at least a week.

Cubs Play

Cup Series Tomorrow

The Fontaine Cup series, emblematic of the Canadian-American Hockey League championship, will open at the Boston Garden tomorrow night. The contending teams will be the Bruins Cubs and Providence Reds.

Reds defeated Quebec Beavers in three-game playoff, taking the first and third games, 5-1 and 3-0, respectively. They lost the second game, 1-0.

VAMAIRE Leads in Race TO HAVANA

By Associated Press

Havana, April 1.—The United States Coast Guard cutter Nike radioed the Cuban naval radio today that the Vamaire, a 72-foot ketch entered by Vdim Makaroff of Oyster Bay, N. Y., apparently is leading the St. Petersburg Havana yacht race.

The fleet was reported somewhere in the Gulf of Mexico.

By Joe Cashman

St. Petersburg, Fla., April 1—One reason Bill McKechnie is in no hurry to insert Rabbit Maranville into the Braves lineup is because there is a little fellow named Les Mallon cavorting around the keystone sack.

Rated when training started as a player who was present simply because nobody better could be found to spell the Rabbit, the diminutive Texan comes very close to being a star in his own right today.

All the other Tribesmen have faltered now and then, but Les has kept on scintillating game after game. Beyond a question of doubt he's been the club's standout spring performer.

Right handers and southpaws, it makes no difference. All pitchers are cousins to him. All fields and fences are familiar to the thud of his ringing blows.

And his fielding satisfies even those who saw the Rabbit perform around second, which is the finest defensive tribute that could be paid a player.

Les didn't do a half bad job after he was called in from Buffalo in mid season last year, but he wasn't himself then.

He suffered a groin injury during his first week on the job, which put him on the shelf for a spell, and he had to return to action before he had completely recovered.

Now in top physical form, he shapes up as the most valuable tribal acquisition in years.

HARNESS RACING Lost to Connecticut

New Haven, Ct., April 1 (AP)—Connecticut was today faced with the prospect of being without light harness racing this season for the first time in many years, and the failure of Gov. Wilbur L. Cross to sign a bill legalizing pari-mutuel betting on horse racing was given as the main cause.

ILLCHESTER IN 6TH BEST

Mr. Boston Gus Old Self Again

By Jack Conway

AROUND the town with Mr. Boston . . .

Alex MacLean's quite happy over the fact he has Gus Sonnenberg wrestling "Farmer" George McLeod in a finish bout at the Arena on Wednesday night. The old caynamiter has won 40 out of 42 bouts since he last showed here . . .

The former world champion wrestled in Australia and in New Zealand as well as in California and in the Middle West. He is whispering to the old guard at Dartmouth that he will win back his lost championship.

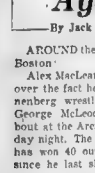
Sonnenberg drew $2,000,000 when he was wrestling king back in boom days. He drew $72,000 with Strangler Lewis in the Garden and then came back and pulled $54,000 with Joe Malcewicz and $40,000 with Count Zarvanoff. Those were the happy days for wrestling as well as for business. Then came the depression and zowie and other things.



Mr. Boston

Paul Bauer of Belmont, who owns the Pine Tree Airways, Inc., has invited Dan O'Mahoney to do some training at his camp at Natagamon Lake, Maine. The camp is 120 miles north of Bangor. Paul promises to make the hop from Boston in three hours.

Bauer has agreed to fly Jack Shanley into the wilds of the Maine woods any time the former champion cares to go fishing or hunting.

"What if you miss your landing field?" I asked.

"The trees are so close together and their branches so thick in the Maine woods that they make a perfect cushion for a plane."

AIR MINDED

WRESTLERS and boxers are getting air minded and usually use planes when making coast to coast hops. Los Angeles is only 18 hours from Boston by air . . .

Strangler Lewis and Gus Sonnenberg have each traveled hundreds of thousands of miles in planes without getting involved in a single accident.

Gus once flew from Portland Ore., in night storm to keep the mail protecting him from the elements so that he could wrestle in Boston.

Bill Carey, who was chief engineer Curtiss Wright took in the erection of airports in all parts of the country, refused to fly even with Colonel Lindbergh as a pilot.

"It might be Lindy's first accident," Carey told me.

Carey, fromer president of the New York Garden, is giving his entire attention to the engineering business with offices on Fifth avenue, New York. Whenever I meet him along Broadway he always asks for Tex Rickard, Hardwick, Jack Sharkey, Johnny Buckley and Dan Carroll.

DANNO VS. SHIKAT

DAN O'MAHONEY continues to carry on with the tireless energy of youth. The Irish champion will oppose Dick Shikat, veteran German heavyweight, in a finish mat bout in the New York Garden tonight.

Shikat is an orthodox wrestler of the old school and believes his wide variety of holds will enable him to halt O'Mahoney and his famous "Irish Whip."

I thought O'Mahoney showed better wrestling form against George Zaharias than he did in any of his previous contests in this country which I have attended. He didn't make a single false move, and, when pressed, displayed a fiery attack.

I still think O'Mahoney could be developed into a great heavyweight boxer if he cared to go after Max Baer's championship.

JOE LOUIS

I DO NOT see any reason for Joe Louis to get discouraged because he failed to knock out Natie Brown at Detroit. He knocked Brown down for a count of nine in the first round.

Then Brown, a veteran of the ring wars, went into a shell and refused to take any chances. It is almost impossible to knock out an experienced fighter who refuses to lead.

Louis has won 17 straight bouts since he joined the ranks of the professionals last July. He still needs ring seasoning, but will gain this with experience. Anybody who can punch as hard as Louis is certain to go places in the ring.

There should be some spirited battling at the New England amateur boxing championships at the Arena tonight. Tom Kanaly has obtained the entries of the class of the elimon pures.

CORUM PREDICTS BIG YEAR FOR SOX

By Bill Corum

St. Petersburg, Fla., April 1—Each year for the past five years on All Fool's Day this column has set down a list of probable happenings in the sports world for the coming seasons.

This custom has developed into a sort of annual game in which steady readers clip and keep the column to hold against us in case our guesses prove to be off key.

[illegible] been known to happen [illegible] and gals have had lots of fun using our attempt in to how wrong we were.

However during the last couple of years [illegible] been in our corner and last season one of the readers who had a mathematical turn of mind figured out that we were [illegible] over 78 per cent right.

But lightning rarely strikes twice in the same place, much less twice [illegible] place in succession [illegible] well be happy if 50 per cent of this year's choices stand up.

In any case this is what we think of the sports field parading toward the past for the 1935 scramble.

That the New York Yankees will win the American League pennant and [illegible] World Series.

That Germany will announce her decision not to be host to next year's Olympic games.

That Max Baer will retain the heavyweight championship, while Joe Louis accepted as his most dangerous challenger, provided they do not meet next fall. If they do, Baer will retain his title just the same.

That Lou Ambers will beat Barney Ross of Chicago for the lightweight crown.

That Drew Dean will have a bad year on the mound, losing much of his prestige, and that the Cardinals will be forced to a tooth and toenail battle to beat the Giants for the National League flag.

HARLOW SUCCESS

That Princeton, Columbia and Colgate will continue to dominate Eastern football gridirons, and that Harvard will make a rapid comeback under Dick Harlow and probably take Yale over the jumps.

That Babe Ruth will be sensational as a drawing card with Boston during the early part of the season. But that he will be forced out of the Braves' lineup before July 4 and will never again attempt to appear as a regular ball player after this spring.

That the dazzling speed of the Yanks will make them the most talked-of club in baseball by midseason.

That the American League champion Detroit Tigers will be fortunate to have second place in the race against the outsiders.

WRESTLING At Mechanics

Plenty of action will be furnished Mechanics Building patrons tomorrow night when Promoter Charlie Gordon resumes his weekly mat shows at the Huntington avenue building. An all-star program of 15 bouts will be offered.

Jose Firpo, light heavyweight champion, hailing from the Argentine, has been matched with Arthur Taddio, Tufts' Medical student, in the main bout, two out of three falls.

This will be Taddio's first chance at the title and the youthful giant is out to make the most of it. On the other hand, Firpo is one of the best of the Gordon troupe, so a real battle is assured.

Wah-Hoo, Oklahoma Indian, tangles with Clyde Barrett, billed as the middleweight champion of the British Isles, in a special 30-minute time limit battle.

TERRY THREATENS TO FIRE GIANTS

By Associated Press

New Orleans, April 1—Bill Terry is not a little irked by the lackadaisical bi-playing of his New York Giants the past few days. After releasing two rookies, Jim Asbell and John Leondo, to Nashville, Bill got rid of the following statemnt:

"And what is more, I have served notice on all the others that this program will continue if I wind up taking nobody back to New York with me except Coaches Tom Clarke and Frank Snyder and Trainer Willie Schaefle."

Winter Haven, Fla.—It will be a busy summer for Van Lingle Mungo, fireball pitcher of the Brooklyn Dodgers, if Manager Casey Stengel adheres to his present plans.

"I expect to use Mungo every four days," Casey said, "and work him in between whenever we need him provided he is able to pitch."

St. Petersburg, Fla.—This jack-of-all-trades business seems to have done Myrl Hoag of the New York Yankees very little good.

Hoag, an outfielder by trade, took a whirl at third base in addition to his regular fly-chasing job this spring but it looks now like he won't be able to force his way into either spot. He may not even be carried for utility duty.

LAST LAP FOR A'S

Atlanta, Ga.—The Athletics today start on the last lap of their trip north.

They headed for Griffin, Ga., to play the local team and later take a late train for Charlotte, N. C. The A's were on a 3-game winning streak when they arrived here Saturday.

West Palm Beach, Fla.—With a record of 11 victories in 14 exhibition games, the St. Louis Browns were on their way north today.

They broke camp here last night after being beaten in their farewell appearance, 3 to 1, by Buffalo. The team will play Baltimore today at Kissimmee, Brooklyn tomorrow and Wednesday at Orlando and then will entrain for St. Louis and a six-game series with the Cardinals.

Bradenton, Fla.—Making their last appearance in Florida this spring, the St. Louis Cardinals will oppose the New Yorkers today at St. Petersburg before beginning their trek North.

KNICKERBOCKER RESTS

New Orleans—The Cleveland Indians started their northward trip today, leaving this city for Memphis, Miss., to play another exhibition game with the New York Giants.

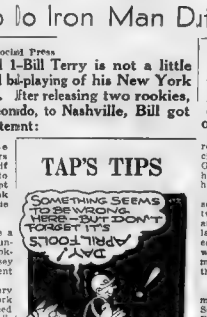
Orlando, Fla.—The Cincinnati Reds were primed for the Brooklyn Dodgers here today in the first of a series of games on their return trip home.

The Reds broke camp late yesterday after losing 8 to 3 to the St. Louis Cardinals. Don Brennan is slated to start the game against Casey Stengel's men today.

TAP'S TIPS



form, Mickey Cochrane may have a pitcher problem on his hands, since he has already taken a liking to the southpaw wark of the rookies, Joe Sullivan and Clyde Hatter.

OUTFIELD UNDECIDED

Los Angeles—with only two days remaining of the stay on the Pacific coast, Manager Charlie Grimm of the Chicago Cubs still has not decided on the makeup of his outfield.

Kiki Cuyler will start the season in centerfield, but the other two jobs are still to be distributed among four candidates. Augie Galan, the former infielder, has the edge over Tuck Stainback in left, while Chuck Klein and Frank Demaree are running about even in the battle for right field.

San Antonio, Tex.—Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox may not be sold on Zeke Bonura's fielding around first base, but he has no complaints about the big Italian's hitting.

Bonura was benched last week because of indifferent fielding, but was returned to action when Glen Wright, the general handyman, was moved from first to second to give Jack Hayes a rest. Yesterday he drove in four runs against the Pittsburgh Pirates with two home runs, one each off Guy Bush and Waite Hoyt.

Plan to Drop Baseball

WILSON'S Top Choice AT BOWIE

GREENTREE ENTRY IN 1ST

By Dave Wilson

BEST—Ilchester, 6th.

Bowie, Md., April 1—Selections made for muddy track. A sparkling card of seven races headlined by the $2000 added inaugural handicap will usher in the official Eastern racing season at this historic plant tomorrow afternoon.

The five-and-one-half furlongs of the feature event has attracted a field of 15 top-notch sprinters with the Shandon Farm's Evergold shaping up in my book as the probable winner.

FIRST RACE

GREENTREE ENTRY, LOOKABOUT, STAGE WHISPER

Tre Greentree entry of TORTITA and FESTOON figures to stand a world of beating if able to get postward. The winter charts attest to their ability. LOOKABOUT displayed high speed in several of her Tropical Park races and figures next best. STAGE WHISPER, a first-time starter, is held in high regard by her connections.

SECOND RACE

ACALTAW, MAD BETH, SISOWEN

ACALTAW, a superior mudder, has always been fond of this racing strip. A breezing six panels in 1:17 indicates that he is ready. MAD BETH, the main danger, is in under a feather of 108 pounds. SISOWEN is a strong possibility on Florida form.

THIRD RACE

PRINCE DRAKE, IMPROMPTU, ALWINTOUR

PRINCE DRAKE, an excellent soft track performer, is entitled to a three-star rating on his imposing Florida record. IMPROMPTU, another clever Florida speedster, is strictly the one to fear. ALWINTOUR will be all dangerous if he gets in.

FOURTH RACE

DANCING DOLL, GOOD HARVEST, LEGUME

DANCING DOLL, freshened up slightly since her Florida campaign, comes up to this event fit to run for a King's ransom. She is right at home in any sort of going. GOOD HARVEST and LEGUME shape up as the main dangers. They are fancied as named.

FIFTH RACE

EVERGOLD, DREEL, PORTER

This event is a wide open affair and I'm only tempting fate by naming EVERGOLD as the winner. The Shandon colorbearer has worked extremely fast and is fond of the track, but he will have to get the breaks. DREEL, a shifty hilda, has done most of his training indoors and may come up a good thing. STAR PORTER is the best horse on paper, but he may need a race.

SIXTH RACE

Ilchester, Golden Way, Alladin's Dream.

Trainer Elmer Trueman says that ILLCHESTER is the best thing he runs tomorrow, which is enough for me. GOLDEN WAY shapes up as the probable favorite on his Florida record. ALLADIN'S DREAM recently whirled a mile in 1:44 3-5 over this oval, which was one of the best trials recorded to date.

SEVENTH RACE

Ahmed, Friend Whitey, Dancing Boy.

AHMED could run backward and handle a field of this sort in Florida. FRIEND WHITEY'S best sort in the mud and I have Trueman's word that he is ready. DANCING BOY for the remainder.

GAMBLING CRAZE SWEEPS COUNTRY

FLORIDA HANDLE $37,000,000

By Damon Runyon

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Miami, April 1—If you wish to learn something of the extent of the gambling craze in this country, kindly consider the estimated "handle" on horse and dog racing in Florida the past season.

It will amount to around $37,000,000.

The state of Florida will get perhaps $1,500,000 for permitting the gambling within its borders. For the season of 1934, the "handle" was $27,549,567, and the state got $867,317.

We know from the official figures that the "handle" on the race tracks of 14 states of the Union in which gambling of this kind was legalized, was, roughly, $160,000,000, which takes no account of the pool room gambling.

ALARMED

This must have amounted to easily $100,000,000, on which no tax could be levied.

If all the new race tracks planned in different parts of the country get in operation, the total amount of money wagered in the next couple of years will stagger the imagination.

They feel that the craze will eventually reduce the quality of racing to a very, very low grade, because there will not be enough horses to go around, and the current supply will be spread out so thin, and raced so much, that the game will suffer.

They need not worry. Some of the states that are adopting racing have no chance of making the game pay within their confines, and what does not pay rarely lasts long.

Several new scenes of legalized racing have commenced to flounder. You have to have population, and the population has to have money to make a go of racing.

This is a great country for overdoing things in haste and regretting at leisure. It is not in the cards that communities of moderate wage earners can long withstand the grind of the mutuels.

Trout Await Anglers

Trout, a million of them, and of all varieties, including the speckled beauties which rest in brooks, are awaiting the opening of the season for Massachusetts fishermen, Raymond Kenny, of the division of fisheries and game, disclosed this morning.

The fishing season opens April 15.

Ponds and streams throughout the state forests have been stocked with the trout since the closing day of last season. Down on the cape 38,000 Chinook salmon have been placed in various ponds.

A list of the streams and ponds which have been stocked and will be available to local anglers who wish to use the coming holiday, April 19, in casting for the fish, may be had by writing to the Division of Fisheries and Game, 20 Somerset street, Boston, Mass.

PHIPPS AGAIN Retains Title

Students Seek Grid Coach

Norman, Okla., April 1 (AP)—Student leaders of the University of Oklahoma today prepared "we want you, Biff" messages to be sent to Capt. Lawrence M. Jones of Louisiana State University, whom they seek as football coach.

The messages, to be sent also to the War Department in Washington, were designed to counteract "protests" against Jones sent to Washington by other students.

New Plays For Eagle Eleven

Boston College opens its second week of spring football this afternoon with a promise of more new plays and formations Coach Dinny McNamara plans to introduce into the offense.

A slightly smaller number of candidates are expected to report to Dinny this week, as the gruelling pace set in practice in last week's sessions begins to take its toll.

The reduction will aid the training of those who remain, as the coaches are short handed.

Tom Brennan, former B. C. high star, looms as the signal-caller of the eleven next fall. The Brockton junior has been showing great promise in his handling of the teams assigned to him.

Tom is remembered as a quarterback at B. C. high for two years, where he piloted the team with great success. He is also a fine forward passer and the best kicker Coach McNamara has.

Center continues to be the weak spot, and a few new men may be drafted for service at this berth.

Golden Miller Trainer Out

London, April 1—Basil Briscoe will no longer train Dorothy Paget's jumpers.

Miss Wethered on Golf Spot

London April 1 (AP)—Indicating she thought too much already has been said about her proposed trip to America for a series of exhibition matches, Joyce Wethered, British golf star, declined further comment today.

THANKS, AG FOR BEATING BRUINS
AND YOU'RE A BOSTON BOY

By Walter Kiley

Six Bruins, Eddie Shore, Marty Barry, Pinkie Davie, Burt McInenly, Peggy O'Neil and Alex Motter, were in Boston today after the Toronto championship playoff invasion.

With them were Manager Frank Patrick, Art Ross, Dr. Martin Crotty and Trainer Win Green. Charlie Sands and Nels Stewart are to arrive here tomorrow.

The balance of the squad headed for their respective homes separated by the 3000 miles of Canadian continent. Max Kaminsky and Jerry Shannon returned to Niagara Falls, Ontario.

Tiny Thompson and Dit Clapper are on their way to Windsor, Ont. They will motor to their far west domiciles. Tiny to Calgary and Dit to Vancouver.

CLAPPER OUT

Red Beattie is on the train to Vancouver. Jack Shill stayed at Toronto, where he lives. Paul Haynes is back in Montreal and so, too, is Babe Seibert.

The Bruins display of courage and play in the final game of the four-game series was a revelation to the hard boiled Toronto fans, especially where the Boston team was so badly handicapped by the loss of Clapper and the fact that Shore was in far from his best form.

Especially was this true of the Haynes-Motter-O'Neil line, which checked the Feared Kid line of the Leafs, Conacher, Jackson and Primeau, to such an extent that they never had a scoring chance.

This is April Fool's Day but there is no fooling about the Junior Birdmen wing honor banner, a new contest for which begins today.

All squadrons start even today, as they did on January 1 when the race for the banner for the first quarter period got under way. The second quarter period will end on June 30, and a new squadron will receive the banner unless the winner for the first quarter period repeats with the highest number of points.

Two points are given for each meeting held by a squadron; 2 points for each report if received within five days of the meeting; 3 for each member who becomes an Eagle; 5 for each member becoming an Ace; 3 for each new member, 1 for each member attending theater parties, airport trips and other features and various numbers of points awarded for participation and victory in wing model plane meets.

TEACHERS Oath Hearing TOMORROW

Hundreds of militant women supporters of the teachers' oath bill are expected to storm the State House tomorrow at a public hearing on the proposed law.

Many indicated their intention to be present at a child welfare conference at the Hotel Westminster under the joint auspices of the American Legion, the Legion auxiliary, the Forty and Eight and the Eight and Forty.

State Commander Jeremiah J. Twomey of the Legion was one of the speakers. He denounced Red activities in American schools and colleges and added that passage of the teachers' oath bill was a step toward curbing them.

Miss Adelaide L. Fitzgerald, rehabilitation chairman of the auxiliary, said that pacifism is increasing at an alarming rate at American institutions of learning.

MAN BURNED
In Charlestown

Peter Monagle, 30, of 88 Washington street, Charlestown was badly burned about the head, face and hands, early today by a fire in his room.

BAUER FAVORS U. S. OATH FOR TEACHERS

Colonel Frederick G. Bauer, of Weymouth, president of the Society of the War of 1812, one of the oldest military organizations in the United States, today endorsed the teachers' oath bill in behalf of that body.

Colonel Bauer said in a Boston statement:

Col. F. G. Bauer

"At a recent meeting of our organization it was voted that the legislature be notified that the Society of the War of 1812 had gone on record as being in favor of the teachers oath bill.

"At the hearing to be held tomorrow a representative of our organization will be on hand at the State House to defend the bill and urge its passage.

"I cannot conceive any reason why objections should be raised by either teachers or college presidents. It is the loyal duty of every teacher and instructor in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to subscribe to the oath and prove their loyalty to the United States government.

"They not only owe it to their government, but to the parents whose children are entrusted in their care."

ECONOMICS

TOWN MEETING

Lawrence, April 1—Petition for a town meeting in Lawrence—the first in many years—was filed with City Clerk John J. Daley today.

John H. McAuliffe, president of the Lawrence Home Owners and Rent Payers' Association, asks council to call the meeting for April 24 in the Oliver School Hall.

Light and gas rates and taxing methods are to be discussed at the meeting.

"PINK SLIPS"
Cost U. S. $9615

Washington, April 1 (AP)—The publicity, or "pink slip," section of the revenue act of 1934, repealed March 28, cost the Government $9615.12 in printing charges, the treasury reported today in announcing 12,200,000 of the slips had been printed.

Officials said all pink slips returned with income tax reports would be scrapped.

Shikat Claims Irish Lineage
Danno's Versus Says Great Grandfather, a McGillicuddy, Exiled From Erin

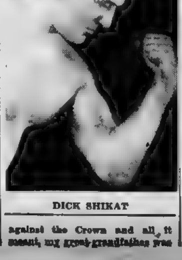
New York, April 1—Dick Shikat, former world wrestling champion, who grapples with Dan O'Mahoney, the Irish title holder, in the feature mat match in the Garden tonight, threatens to throw a spike into the plans of the Corker from Cork to hold the affection of the loyal sons of Erin who will be at the ringside.

"I think I have just as much right to enter the ring wearing a bathrobe of green and gold, banked with a harp, as has O'Mahoney," said Shikat.

"It is true that I was born over the Rhine, that, as some say, I am decidedly Teutonic in my speech, even though I am a citizen of the United States. But what few know is that on one side of the house of Shikat I am as Irish as O'Mahoney.

"For my great-grandfather, on my mother's side, was an exile from Erin. He was a disciple of O'Connell, Gladstone and Parnell. His name was Patrick Aloysius McGillicuddy and his people, even back to the days of Brian Boru lived in the dales of Killarney.

"But because he was ever against the Crown and all it meant, my great-grandfather was arrested, tried for treason and condemned to the gallows.



DICK SHIKAT

"Later this drastic punishment was modified and he was sent to Botany Bay, the penal colony for political foes of the British Empire.

"Like many another exile from Erin, he escaped into the Australian bush. He was there in the days of John Boyle O'Reilly and others who became famous in this country in later years.

"It is part of our family history that he was a friend of the famous Moonyne Joe of the Australian Bush, who, some say, was John Boyle O'Reilly.

"To this day, none of us knows how he escaped from Australia and reached Germany. But reach Germany he did, married a fraulein in Bavaria, and from this stock comes yours truly.

"So, when I hear the Irish pipes skirling the 'Wearin' of the Green,' I get as big a kick out of it as does Dan O'Mahoney or any exile from the ould sod.

"So, don't be surprised if I hop into the ring with a green bathrobe on, and hop out, about half an hour later with the title of champion wrestler of the Irish Free State."

"A Cry in the Night"

Wollaston Nurse Tells of Her Terrifying Experience

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Get a tight grip on your nerves, boys and girls, and huddle up close while I tell you a tale that will start the cold shivers playing the scale up and down your vertebrae.

Registered Nurse Carolyn M. Luther, nee Macdonald, of 86 Green street, Wollaston, furnished the tremolo music and, by golly, it's just about as shaky as any I ever want to hear. Hold on to your hat. Here we go.

Turn back the calendar to February, 1909. The scene is the Nurse's Club, 526 Massachusetts avenue, Boston. The hour is midnight.

The scene opens with Miss Carolyn Macdonald, a young graduate nurse, stretched luxuriously in her warm bed. Outside the wind howls and the winter sleet beats an icy tattoo on the window pane.

Carolyn snuggles under the covers and reaches for another chocolate. She is just thanking her lucky stars that she has no call on a night like this, when—

Ding-a-ling, goes the telephone and the play is ready to start. The call is from the Directory for Nurses—the voice as cold as the winter night.

"Miss Macdonald—very sick man—alone with invalid sister—hurry—yes, right away——"

The call to duty had come and Carolyn—pausing only to jot down the address and spring into her clothes—was soon off to her new case. Young, eager for thrills and more eager to please she sped in a taxi to an address in Hyde Park.

The taxi stopped in front of a grim, forbidding grey stone house of by-gone splendor, isolated in a lonely pine grove. The icy wind went right through her as she picked her way up snow-covered steps.

She rang the bell and heard it echoing in the distance—as though the house were empty. No one answered so she rang again and started as the door silently opened.

A very old lady, in a white nightdress peered at her intently and beckoned her in. Carolyn stepped into a dark hallway—dark except for the feeble rays of a small candle which the old lady carried in an old candlestick.

"Follow me," was all she said and Carolyn had all she could do to keep up with the strange creature as she quickly and silently mounted two carpetless stairways and ran along a long narrow hall.

They came to a room—bare except for a bed—on which Carolyn could make out a still form. This must be the patient, she thought, and she asked for more light. The old lady turned on her impatiently.

"Electricity must be used only in an emergency," she said.

Carolyn asked for the doctor's instructions and to her surprise a bright light suddenly was switched on from somewhere and she was handed a note.

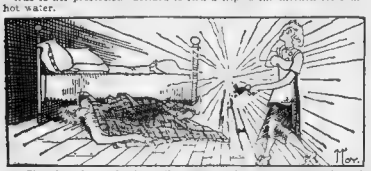
"Nothing to do," the doctor's note read, "but make patient comfortable—see you in the morning."

Carolyn says she had hardly read the note when the light was switched off again and the lighted candle thrust in her hand. She saw a patch of white disappearing in the darkness and heard a shrill voice.

"Don't you dare disturb me again," the voice said. Carolyn heard a door close in the distance and the sound of heavy bolts. She was alone with her patient.

Carolyn says the candle trembled and flickered as she approached the bed. In its dim light she saw the thin, emaciated face and outline of a man. He was unconscious and apparently dying.

But the doctor had said to make the patient comfortable so Carolyn—true to her profession—decided to risk a trip to the kitchen for some hot water.



She slipped quietly down the stairs and after roaming through strange empty rooms, found the kitchen. She looked for the electric light switch but there was none.

The candle shed a faint glow around the room and she was able to put the kettle on and light the gas with her candle. Matches were nowhere to be seen.

Carolyn started toward the pantry—and then STOPPED HORROR-STRICKEN IN HER TRACKS! A STRANGE VOICE STARTLED HER!!!!!

"I want something—I want something."

The voice seemed to be right in the room with her. She says she remembers mumbling something about "Who's there?" and then she jumped for the door.

Another shock was waiting for her as she entered the dining room. She heard a low growl and almost fell over a big Great Dane dog.

But the dog, Carolyn says, after a few tense moments, responded to her frightened caresses and rubbed against her in a friendly manner.

Somewhat reassured, she returned to the kitchen and, picking up her water and candle, started on her return trip.

"Get out of here, damn you," it said.

Carolyn just stood there paralyzed and waited. She could see nobody was in the room and yet she knew her ears had not played a trick on her. The big dog seemed to be calm so she began to gather her wits.

The house must be haunted, she thought. Then she remembered the strange old lady and fear of her made her look for a cloth to wipe up the water she had spilt on the floor.

Well, sir, Carolyn says, her sigh of relief nearly blew out the precious candle—and she had no matches! Up the stairs she went—as fast as she could and into her patient's bedroom.

She glanced at the bed and this time, by golly, the candle DID GO OUT!

THE BED WAS EMPTY!

Things happened fast then, Carolyn's hysterical screams brought the old lady in on the run—the lights that were used only for emergencies flared up—the emergency was there—for the patient had gotten out of bed for the last time—he lay dead across the floor!

And that's not all. Carolyn helped the old lady put her brother back on the bed and—believe it or not—he old lady handed Carolyn ONE MATCH—went back to her room and—THE LIGHTS WENT OUT!

In conclusion, Carolyn says, "When daylight dawned, I wept for joy."

PHEW! I should think she would have "wept for joy," don't you? What a story! And, boys and girls, it's all absolutely true.

OPERA'S Costly Gesture Legend Is Exploded

By GEORGE HOLLAND

That legend about the opera in Boston being a costly gesture toward civic culture on the part of the "400" families will be exploded, I trust, before I am forced to getting around to subscribing to the box of the head of town, with figures.

Figures are [illegible] citizens are [illegible] banking books on the [illegible]

I wonder [illegible] the [illegible] papers for the past 20 years [illegible] their [illegible] ventions of 1890.

In the days when I used to see George Murphy dance in New York I thought there had been never been a more nimble-footed youth. Then came Hollywood and George gave us all his dances engagements for the movies. Not once since he reached Hollywood has he played in a single picture where he has had a chance to go Fred Astaire.

Now it's going to be different. He will have a lead in "Song of the Dammed," an original by Harlow Lorraine, in which he has a chance to do his best steps. Leo Bulgakow, former-ly of the Moscow Art theater, will direct him.

Heard unofficially that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is trying to borrow Leslie Howard for the role of Sidney Carton in "A Tale of Two Cities." Leslie plays two distinct characters in "Scarlet Pimpernel" and it was after he demonstrated his versatility in these two opposite types that negotiations with him were started.

I hope one actor will play both Sidney Carton and the marquis, for it seems to me it would destroy Dickens' idea to have two actors for two men who were supposed to look exactly alike.

Interesting the way these studios are buying already selling stories. Paramount has purchased the screen rights to "Let's Get Married" from RKO and put it into production with Sylvia Sidney and Fred MacMurray in the leads.

It's the story of two young married people during their first year and it's based on a book "Let's Have a Baby" by Howard Buck. Sylvia seems to have more admirers than any unattached girl in Hollywood—she is always dining or dancing with some attentive youth.

Chatter in Hollywood: Robert Cobb the very attentive cafe man today had the surprise that comes once in a lifetime when John Emerson asked him to make a screen test. Bob, according to Anita Loos, is the type most favored in pictures—a two-fisted guy on the Clark Gable type. If Bob can be spared long enough from supervising the eats in the chain of cafes he manages, we may find him playing a role for John Emerson. And here's a laugh: Anita Loos says she has never worked so hard in her life as she has since she worked for John.

I visited Joe F. Brown in Fullerton, where he and Warner Baxter [illegible] company are on location. Joe E. is the idol of the town. He is followed down the street by an army of small boys and girls. One little girl came up to him and said

"Will you talk to me?"

Joe E. said: "Certainly. What do you want me to say?"

Oh, anything," said the little girl, "the other girls throw it in my face that you have talked to all of them and not to me."

So Joe E. took the little lady by the arm and led her up the street and now she is the envy of the school.

Snapshots of Hollywood

A. C. BLUMENTHAL flying into town. According to our New York gossips he has the great admiration of MERLE OBERON. A letter from the Melrose Park Chamber of Commerce [illegible] some Chicago, inviting the movies to locate there; JOSEPH ARGWESTY, head of the C. C. asks me to use my influence the JANET GAYNOR-GENE RAYMOND romance at fever heat; they were at the Cocoanut Grove again dancing.

ROCHELLE HUDSON luncheoning with ROSS ALEXANDER who is free attractive; MAX REINHARDT entertaining CHALIAPIN at VICTOR HUGO'S; MRS. HARRY COHN had CHALIAPIN in tow, showing him the Columbia Studios; wonder if it's true he is to make a picture for Columbia" MRS. DOUGLAS SHEARER, sister-in-law of NORMA, presenting her husband with a boy at the Santa Monica hospital; DOUGLAS SHEARER is head of the MGM sound department.

EDDIE BUZZELL and JUNE CLAYWORTH stepping out; TULLIO CARMINATI off to the Desert Inn for a rest; TULLIO much in demand at all the Hollywood dinners and parties; LEE TRACY around and about, here and there once more fancy free; seeming to mean it; SIDNEY KENT weekending at WINFIELD SHEEHAN'S ranch in Hidden Valley. That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Ann Harding to Rest

Honolulu Vacation When She Finishes "The Flame Within"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, April 1.—Ann Harding is in much better health but still in need of rest and plenty of sunshine. She will therefore sail for Honolulu and Waikiki Beach as soon as she finishes "The Flame Within" for Edmund Goulding. While Ann is getting full of health and resting she will read a script for RKO.

It's a story called "The Portrait of a Rebel," by Netta Syrett, and it was purchased with Miss Harding in mind. It gives her plenty of comedy and drama in that the heroine is a woman who rebels against the mid-Victorian conventions of 1890.

Heard unofficially that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is trying to borrow Leslie Howard for the role of Sidney Carton in "A Tale of Two Cities." Leslie plays two distinct characters in "Scarlet Pimpernel" and it was after he demonstrated his versatility in these two opposite types that negotiations with him were started.

I hope one actor will play both Sidney Carton and the marquis, for it seems to me it would destroy Dickens' idea to have two actors for two men who were supposed to look exactly alike.

Interesting the way these studios are buying already selling stories. Paramount has purchased the screen rights to "Let's Get Married" from RKO and put it into production with Sylvia Sidney and Fred MacMurray in the leads.

It's the story of two young married people during their first year and it's based on a book "Let's Have a Baby" by Howard Buck. Sylvia seems to have more admirers than any unattached girl in Hollywood—she is always dining or dancing with some attentive youth.

Chatter in Hollywood: Robert Cobb the very attentive cafe man today had the surprise that comes once in a lifetime when John Emerson asked him to make a screen test. Bob, according to Anita Loos, is the type most favored in pictures—a two-fisted guy on the Clark Gable type. If Bob can be spared long enough from supervising the eats in the chain of cafes he manages, we may find him playing a role for John Emerson. And here's a laugh: Anita Loos says she has never worked so hard in her life as she has since she worked for John.

I visited Joe F. Brown in Fullerton, where he and Warner Baxter [illegible] company are on location. Joe E. is the idol of the town. He is followed down the street by an army of small boys and girls. One little girl came up to him and said

"Will you talk to me?"

Joe E. said: "Certainly. What do you want me to say?"

Oh, anything," said the little girl, "the other girls throw it in my face that you have talked to all of them and not to me."

Snapshots of Hollywood

A. C. BLUMENTHAL flying into town. According to our New York gossips he has the great admiration of MERLE OBERON. A letter from the Melrose Park Chamber of Commerce [illegible] some Chicago, inviting the movies to locate there; JOSEPH ARGWESTY, head of the C. C. asks me to use my influence the JANET GAYNOR-GENE RAYMOND romance at fever heat; they were at the Cocoanut Grove again dancing.

ROCHELLE HUDSON luncheoning with ROSS ALEXANDER who is free attractive; MAX REINHARDT entertaining CHALIAPIN at VICTOR HUGO'S; MRS. HARRY COHN had CHALIAPIN in tow, showing him the Columbia Studios; wonder if it's true he is to make a picture for Columbia" MRS. DOUGLAS SHEARER, sister-in-law of NORMA, presenting her husband with a boy at the Santa Monica hospital; DOUGLAS SHEARER is head of the MGM sound department.

EDDIE BUZZELL and JUNE CLAYWORTH stepping out; TULLIO CARMINATI off to the Desert Inn for a rest; TULLIO much in demand at all the Hollywood dinners and parties; LEE TRACY around and about, here and there once more fancy free; seeming to mean it; SIDNEY KENT weekending at WINFIELD SHEEHAN'S ranch in Hidden Valley. That's all today. See you tomorrow.

RATE DECISION

Aid to RAILROAD Bonds

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

The sudden intrusion of the emergency rail rate increase calls for some readjustment of market ideas. But it means the lifting of a depressant rather than the supplying of a strong bull factor.

Coming at the time rails faced a wage increase, the allowance for higher rates on certain classes of freight is most welcome. It calls for a sigh of relief. Marketwise an upward movement in rail securities. However, it is not an excuse for unmitigated bullishness, since sober after thought draws attention to the fact the relation between rail revenues, costs and earnings has only ben held in balance.

Principal cheer rightfully belongs to the bond department. Railroad liens have been badly pummeled since early this year. The spectre of a wage bill jump on April first, which would further cut slim margins by which interest was covered, played a large part in the selling. Now that the increase in wages is covered buyers should retrieve their courage to some extent. We would emphasize this angle and more or less disregard the immediate fluctuations in the share department.

H. A. Wallace

Notebook: Now if one could only tell what the Supreme Court would have to say on the Pension Act . . . With this out of the way sudden news on the rail group would be cleaned up . . . Then one could return to a study of fundamentals . . . Principally traffic . . . Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace has something more than a little trouble on his hands . . . The cotton situation . . . Yet it is not entirely his doing . . . The processing tax is bad but the Bankhead curtailment plan is also susceptible to blame.

An upward movement of oil stock prices, notorious harbingers of spring in the stock market, is being spoken of in the financial district. This year conditions are not quite so favorable. A lower gasoline price level in the first quarter will affect earnings sufficiently to sour some traders on the group. Gasoline stocks have also increased. But these are below the 1934 level. With motor output swinging ahead, and a stronger price structure possible through increased consumption, we think the oil group worthy of attention.

Shorts: Continental, Phillips, Texas and Tidewater are oils we hear boosted . . . And in circles likely to provide some real support for their favorites . . . Texas has long been a staunch choice of ours . . . And the 1934 statement supplies cause for cheer . . . They do insist on saying the banking bill of 1935 will pass "as is" . . . And Washington services today repeat their cheery advice the holding company bill will not get by as administration advisors hope.

PERSONAL PROP. Has Yearly Gain

RAIL HOLDINGS Show Few Changes

N. Y. CITY Bank Stocks SHOW RALLY

New York City bank stocks declined further to a new low for 1935 on March 28, the aggregate value of 16 leading issues, according to records compiled by Holt, Rose & Troster, amounting to $1,235,476,000.

There was a slight rally at the close of the week, however, the aggregate value increasing to $1,248,114,000, compared with $1,259,855,000 on March 22, a decrease for the week of $11,741,000, or 0.93 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 5.67 per cent compares with a yield of 5.62 per cent on March 22. The current market value is now 1.02 times the known book value, against 1.03 times at the close of the previous week.

Based upon current figures, the 16 issues are now quoted at an average of 10.6 times their known earnings, compared with 10.7 times on March 22.

Tide Water Improves Position

Despite unfavorable ratios between crude oil and product prices, necessitating gasoline prices so low in some communities as to prevent realizing the cost of manufacture, Tide Water Associated Oil Co.'s annual statement shows net income for 1934 of $5,810,657, after all charges and federal taxes, equal, after 6 per cent preferred dividend requirements, to 35 cents a share on the 5,631,341 shares of common stock outstanding.

This compares with net income of $7,265,301, or 61 cents a share on the common, in 1933.

Gross revenues for 1934 of $95,666,725 showed an increase of $8,063,736, or 9.2 per cent over the preceding year.

Bar Gold

Better Demand for Domestic Wools

Most houses handling greasy domestic wools in the Boston market received a fairly good demand during the past week. Individual sales were not of exceptionally large volume in most cases, but there was a fairly steady and broad demand for moderate quantities on a number of lines. Prices ruled mostly steady to firm.

The outstanding activity in fleece wools was the movement of medium grades, particularly suitable for knitting purposes. Sales of these wools comprised a variety of semi-bright and average bright wools from the Middle West. Clothing 56s, ⅜ blood wools of these types brought 45-48c, scoured basis, while average combing 48s, 50s, ¼ blood, of similar types brought around 41-43c, scoured basis.

Cables to private concerns in Boston reported steady to strong prices in the leading foreign markets. A little wool was reported to have been bought abroad for America.

Demand for mohair in Boston was reported a little slower than last week. Prices, however, were firm. Adult good selected Texas mohair was quoted at 23-25c, and kid was quoted mostly around 40c for original bag lots of the better types. Sorts and tops were also quieter, but deliveries on contracts were good.

The demand for woolen wools continued to be good, especially for B supers which brought 53-57c, and for choice white B's which sold at 57-59c. Moderate quantities of the finer grades of scoured pulled wools moved at unchanged prices. Noils were fairly active and prices were firm on Bradford combed noils, but easy on French noils.

There was a fairly good demand for spot carpet wools for immediate delivery at firm prices.

Bar Silver

London, April 1 (AP)—Bar silver quiet, 1-16 lower at 28 7-16d. (U. S. equivalent 61.30 cents.)

Smelting Inferences Erroneous

The recent issuance of the earnings statement of the United States Smelting, Refining & Mining Co. for the months of January and February was followed by a 15-point break in the common stock to 100%.

Apparently the selling was induced by the revelation that earnings for the common in these two months were equal to but 45 cents a share, against $1.18 in the same two months a year ago.

But it should have been borne in mind that last year, as stated in the report, the earnings were inflated by a non-recurrent quotational gain on gold of $294,000.

To this extent the comparison was distorted. Eliminating this inventory appreciation, which was merely an accident, it may be said that common share earnings of 45 cents for these two months this year really compare with 62 cents a year ago—so slight a reduction as to be without the slightest significance.

EXCHANGE $1,060,890 LOSS SHOWN

Report of New York Stock Exchange, certified by independent auditors, for year ended Dec. 31, 1934, shows a substantial drop in gross income, reflecting largely the decrease in use of facilities of the Exchange and its subsidiary companies, notably Stock Clearing Corp.; net loss after depreciation, taxes, interest, etc., of $1,060,890 compared with loss of $199,121 in 1933.

Publication of the 1934 report is the second instance of its kind, the 1933 figures being the first made public after the Exchange had taken up the matter with Securities and Exchange Commission.

RAILS Lead List HIGHER

TRADING PACE IS SLOW

Reflecting the better outlook afforded by the Interstate Commerce Commission's rate findings, announced after the market closed Saturday, rails got off to a good start and held most of their advantage during the first hour.

Among leaders of the upturn were Union Pacific, Delaware & Hudson, Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania and New York Central.

Feeling Is Better

In the light of week-end news developments brokerage circles seemed to feel a little better, although in most board rooms an attitude of caution still predominated.

Announcement of the Southern California Edison Co., Ltd., of a refunding issue of $73,000,000 of 3¾ per cent 25-year mortgage bonds helped to brighten the financial horizon and to further stress the large amounts of idle money seeking investment at record low rates.

Just how much new financing will be expanded in April was a matter of conjecture in banking quarters, but there were indications in banking offices that refunding plans are being considered by various important corporations.

The SEC reported total registrations in March of $281,000,000 in bond offerings.

In early dealings sterling was off ⅛ of a cent at $4.79⅜ and the French franc was up .01¼ of a cent at 6.59⅞ cents.

BOSTON Prices Are IRREGULAR

Decorations Bribery

Pass the Knutson Bill

THE bill introduced in Congress by Representative Knutson of Minnesota making it unlawful for an American citizen to accept any gift, title or other emolument from foreign governments deserves prompt enactment.

The sentiment of the American people is unanimously in favor of such a measure.

As the Hearst newspapers have recently observed, the people of the United States have always looked with disfavor upon the acceptance by Americans of decorations from foreign nations.

This feeling has been so definite from the earliest days of our Government that it found expression in our Constitution, a provision of which reads as follows:

"No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States, and no person holding any office of profit or trust under them shall, without the consent of the Congress, accept of any present, emolument, office or title of any kind whatever from any king, prince or foreign State."

IT IS entirely unreasonable that this prohibition should apply only to persons holding an office of profit or trust under the Government. It should apply to all citizens, as the present Knutson bill is drawn.

We think, however, the bill could be improved.

It should expressly include decorations and medals as well as "presents, emoluments or titles," and the penalty for a violation of the act should go further than the mere suspension of the rights of citizenship for a period of two years.

The offender's citizenship should be forfeited, and punishment should include a fine or, in the alternative, imprisonment, as provided in the existing law governing persons holding an office of profit or trust under the Government.

The principle of the Knutson bill, however, is sound, and its passage either with or without the changes here suggested would be most salutary.

DECORATIONS are a cheap form of bribery, and it is regrettable that so many of our citizens seem susceptible to this form of corruption.

A foreign government does not confer its bauble distinctions upon an American citizen for services rendered to his own country, but for services rendered to itself or which the recipient is in a position to render.

Whose Ox Is Gored?

Makes a Difference

You have been following the important news from Europe, rarely, and you know about the Government of Lithuania convening four German Nazis to be hanged, on conviction of spying, and plotting to separate Memel from Lithuania.

Lithuania does not want to lose Memel and thinks it wise to hang a few "to discourage the others."

A tall, German gentleman, in full dress, with white kid gloves, chopping off the heads of two ladies accused of spying on Germany's military secrets seems to Mr. Hitler quite all right. He cannot understand why such a fuss was made about it in foreign countries.

But he wants war with Lithuania, or thinks he does, because of Lithuania's hangings.

Berlin is reported NOT so much excited about the Lithuanian incident. Perhaps the Berliners are getting used to killings, perhaps they prefer to get along without another war right away.

Oath of Loyalty

For Vermont Teachers

Governor Charles M. Smith of Vermont and the Legislature of the Green Mountain State deserve the thanks of American patriots.

They have enacted into law the bill requiring public school teachers to take the oath of allegiance to the United States.

The loyal teachers will be glad to take the oath.

They will be glad to set the example of loyalty for their boy and girl pupils to copy.

The descendants of the Green Mountain Boys, along with later comers, can well be proud of the 14th State to join the Union.

She sets the latest lesson in loyalty.

The Dying League

It Can't Draw a Tear

London dispatches admitting that the League of Nations is in a dying condition draw no tears here.

Propagandists seeking to drag us into the European maelstrom doubtless chuckled with glee when they saw the question of joining the League go on our ballots.

No Broken Neck

X-ray Tells the Story

Physicians at the Maine General Hospital recently X-rayed a hitch-hiker who claimed to have made his way to Portland from Texas with a broken neck.

Beautiful Big Eyes

Can't See Far Ahead

Dr. Louis Jacques of Los Angeles, addressing the Ontario Optometrical Association in Toronto, tells other physicians that the great big saucer eyes of beautiful screen actresses may be beautiful indeed but that such eyes are usually sick eyes, suffering from short-sightedness.

That may account for the film divorces.

The Old 'Joke' Once More

It was a New Deal promise that recovery experiments which did not work would be abandoned.

The NRA has proved itself to be that kind of experiment.

Is the NRA therefore to be dropped?

Evidently not. April Fool Day finds Congress tinkering with it, getting ready to lay it before the harassed business man again, packed with promises of how and why it will work.

In other words, an old "joke" is to be "pulled" again!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, April 1 — Diary: Abed late, the morning mizzling, and to breakfast with Bob Brinkerhoff back from a safari to see the Hopi Indians in New Mexico and bull fighting in Juarez. And home to find a vintner's rare blend Gilbert White sent from Provence and a gay letter from Mark Kelly, the sports gazetteer.

O. O. McIntyre

So fashioning my essay, packing 200 books to send to Ohio and with my wife for a saunter up the avenue. And saw John Charles Thomas, spruce, in double-breasted stripes, in one block and hatless Prof. Einstein in another. Also Earl Carroll. And I put up for two frozen cream drinks at the St. Moritz.

Dinner at the Voisin and as beautiful a young girl as ever I saw, not more than 19, at the next table with no awareness of her freshness and charm. But everybody flattery about John Barrymore across the room. So to Steve and Buff Cobb Brody's spread for Claudette Colbert of the cinemas.

Among the vanished sanities filtering back into an upset world is the abolishment of the cut-in dances at junior events, especially the college prom and Biltmore tea dances. They are now becoming strictly program affairs with the graceful waits in ascendency. In many instances the cut-in resulted in brawls.

George Jessel, to relieve the tedium of a movie house tour that keeps him in his dressing room much of the day and night for his five appearances, is dashing off his memoirs.

They will unveil a vivid stage life that began at the age of 8 when he was a Grand street boy and includes intimacies with celebrities from the crown prince to Max Baer. It will be titled: "Twenty-Five Cents Till Two O'Clock"—the affiche so usual in front of the picture theaters.

Ramona, incidentally, has been the collegiate choice for several seasons. When the lads are down from New Haven or over from Princeton, whooping it up they always try to round in for a broadcast. Ramona is a tall, thin, brunette, not beautiful but interesting looking in a sort of gawky Zasu Pitts way.

She cares little about the boys but instead is a determined career-ist. No one sings songs so effortlessly, so casually. But she is a marvelous pianist and can put over a song as few in her time.

I belong to the Nora Bayes school of song delivery. My musical tastes have advanced little beyond the popular song and to my notion no one topped Miss Bayes. Her greatest peak was reached in vaudeville with her then husband, Jack Norworth, during the era they were exploiting his melody, "Shine on Harvest Moon."

I remember a night at Proctor's Fifth Avenue, which was quaintly enough on Broadway, they received 15 encores. They were gracious but exhausted and Miss Bayes almost whispered: "We love you but cannot sing another note."

So the audience flashed to its feet and cheered. Never have I seen such demonstration in the theater. Next day they were married.

Hammerstein's barny old Victoria was the most eagerly sought colleseum for launching the newest Tin Pan Alley tintinnabulation. To have a song first sung there was considered a sweet break for the composer. For song pluggers it was paradise.

The song putter-overs included Elizabeth Brice, Sally Fisher, Josephine Morfol Hite, Grace Larue, Stella Mayhew, Artie Mehlinger, Ernest Ball, Eddie Leonard, the Courtney sisters, Van and Schenck and Flo Adler. When one of these yodeled your tune, it was made.

Bagatelles: Ziegfeld's valet Sidney is now valeting William Anthony Macguire in Hollywood . . . Milt Gross was once an office boy for Tad . . . Elsa Maxwell, who never took a lesson, says she can play any instrument . . .

Cobina Wright recently sang her songs creditably on the radio with a fever of 102 . . . Philip Wylie thinks the horse is the ugliest and dumbest of animals . . . Broadway columnist Ed Sullivan is signed for a $3000 a week movieshouse tour.

Trick of fate: Marie Dressler was planning to invest her last $2200 in a pension for Americans in Paris when someone persuaded her to try Hollywood again.

My wife asked Irvin Cobb for his autographed picture to hang in her house we are building. "I'm always pleased," he replied, "to do something for the Home Beautiful Movement in America." With that snap!

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

"What Has Love to Do With Happiness?"

Gemma grinned—brooded over the edge of her teacup with haunted eyes in which there was no smile at all—snickered impishly as she saw pretty Fenella's fairy-tale notions crashing to bits.

Elsie Robinson

But this you forget at first sight of that thin, white face, beating like a brave little flame against the dark stupidity and cruelty of Fenella's world.

In that first flash, play and stage both vanish and, instead, there is Gemma, the gypsy, wildly daring, madly adoring, yet masking it all beneath a gamin grin—Gemma who knows life, Fenella who doesn't—and Sebastian who molds life to suit himself.

LOVE AND HAPPINESS

Gemma and Fenella—both fighting for Sebastian.

But how can Fenella know what that fight really means? How can she know the truth about anything, shielded as she has been from every harsh and challenging reality?

Fenella knows pretty patter, graceful gestures, romantic axioms about marrying and living happy ever after—that is all.

But Gemma knows life—as is. And the whole human tragedy turns in your own heart when she cries, across that taunting teacup—

"WHAT HAS LOVE TO DO WITH HAPPINESS?"

Fenella's lovely, shallow eyes widened with amazement at that question—likewise the eyes of almost every lady in the audience. And, I suspect, the eyes of several of our prettier young gentlemen.

SOMETHING WRONG

For, according to our American creed, happiness is the aim and test of all love. That's what love is for—to make you happy.

If it doesn't, there's something wrong with it. You have made a terrible mistake or been cruelly cheated and there's only one thing to do—get out of the wretchedness as quickly as possible.

But to Gemma, ragged, hungry, heartsick, such a creed is childish nonsense. Love for Sebastian had never given her any happiness or peace. Instead, it had brought her tears, humiliation, worry and weariness. And always, world.

She had no illusions. Sebastian was Sebastian—nothing could ever change him. Sebastian was a cruel monster, and any woman who gave him her heart might expect to have it broken each day in some new and more devilish way.

At the Fenella squeaks shocked protest. How can Gemma possibly love Sebastian and yet call him a monster? If she loved him she would worship him and be ecstatically happy!

Gemma grins. What has love to do with happiness? One loves, no matter what it costs. Just as one lives, no matter what it costs. Love is as ruthless as life. Care as little for your reactions.

Either you can take it or you can't.

HAPPINESS AND CAKE

If you take it, it's for better or worse—usually worse. But what of it? Only fools demand or even expect happiness with the great, grim business of loving.

But life or love without happiness are beyond Fenella's comprehension. Why do anything unless one is happy?

"YOU TALK AS IF HAPPINESS WERE CAKE!" snorts Gemma, who so seldom has even bread. What a fool! Demanding sugar-frosting. Only babies refuse to play unless they have "cake."

There was, to be sure, another sort of "happiness"—but how could anyone make Fenella understand that? An agonizing ecstasy from which you could not escape—a dreadful bond between two souls, demanding sacrifice, humiliation—daily crucifixion.

IMPISH TONGUE

Grinning across the table, Gemma's sad, gypsy eyes surveyed the long years ahead and reckoned the cost to the last tear.

Was she also clicking that impish tongue at some of the faces on the other side of the footlights—the stupid, sentimental faces of those with a 15-year-old conception of love? I suspect she was!

Bandits and Understudies

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Possibly the news dispatches are a bit too optimistic when they report the end of banditry in Corsica. The notorious Andre Spada said to be the last of the menacing mountain brigands, has been caught and sentenced to the guillotine.

Edwin C. Hill

There is good ground for satisfaction, and possibly for the hopeful news reports; the truth is that the "last bandit" has been caught more than once in those regions, and it has always been a "Petit farewell"—there's always one more appearance.

Such has been the history of southern European brigandage for two or three hundred years.

THE "LAST BANDIT"

Before Napoleon's rule brigands seized towns cities and whole districts in Italy, Sicily and Corsica, his native island, Italian in all political allegiance.

He ordered his generals to catch the outlaws and display their heads prominently on pikes at crossroads and at the public places where the more hard-boiled citizens would be sure to see them.

These orders were diligently carried out and the procedure was undoubtedly a wholesale deterrent. A big news story of 1812 was the trapping and execution of the "last bandit" in Sicily.

But the "last bandit," as always before, had plenty of understudies. The mountain gangsters were soon looting, torturing and killing again, not only in Italy, Sicily and Corsica, but in Spain, Greece and the Balkan states.

Italy deserves no invidious distinction in this recital. Modern students of these historic antecedents of our racketeering and bandiitry in these countries largely to the abundance of made-to-order hiding places.

HARD TO POLICE

Nowhere in the world was there such a perfect haven for bad men as the wild, desolate and in that day virtually uncharted Abruzzi mountains.

Insular little England, with no remote caves or mountain hideouts found its Sherwood forest comparatively easy to police.

Up until early in the nineteenth century France had had trouble enough, too, with those dreadful "Ecorcheurs," or "skinners," and the "Chauffeurs," who used to burn the feet of their victims to extort money.

After the fall of Napoleon, there flourished again in Italy Sicily and Corsica a line of picturesque villains who had a way of getting into the folk lore of the country.

"Robin Hood" seems to bob up in all countries, and the mountains of the Abruzzi were notably prolific in legends and verse about scoundrels who robbed the rich and gave to the poor.

One of these, at the height of his power in the above period, was Marco Sciarra, who led a ravaging and ruthless band of 600 rogues which could have given Attila advanced lessons in villainy.

He was followed by one Benedetto Mangone, almost equally ressurceful in all departments of wickedness, seizing whole towns and holding them for ransom, as did his predecessors.

FERDINAND ACTS

Ferdinand, restored after the fall of Napoleon, brought to Italy an honest and courageous English officer, Sir Richard Church. Sir Richard did well, bagging many of the most notorious outlaws, but somehow, like ragweed, the roots of lawlessness still remained.

Up until the unification of Italy in 1860, one gang after another took charge of the afflicted regions. For a decade or so the government seemed to be getting the upper hand, and then most of the decisions went to the bandits.

It was not until the eighties and nineties that honest Italian premiers and other government officials started gunning for the political crooks and corrupt government employes.

That started the gangsters on the run, and if Andre Spada is really Corsica's last bandit, the above technique probably yields the explanation.

In Spain, Catalonia was the hot-bed of banditry—you have only to substitute the word "racketeering" to bring it down to date.

Kidnaping had a big run there, too, as in Greece.

At Oropos, near Marathon, Lord and Lady Manchester and a number of their English companions were seized, in 1870, and held for a ransom of 25,000 pounds.

Two of the company were killed and the ransom collected before the others were released, but the Greek government finally ran down and executed all the gang.

Problem of Schools

Editor Boston American:

In view of the unusual activity of a high school alumni in seeking to advance the head master of the school to the position of assistant superintendent of schools, it may be well to recall a little school history.

During the decade from 1909 to 1919 six head masters of Boston high schools had been elevated from the English high school faculty. They were Messrs. Casey, Snow, Evans, Gartland, Tower and Thomas.

When vacancies occurred in district high school head masterships an English high school teacher was usually promoted to the vacancy. There was no merit list and appointments were made at the discretion of the superintendent.

It was generally understood among Boston high school teachers that the only chance for promotion to a head mastership was through teaching at the English high school.

It was also generally understood that the influence of English high school alumni controlled such appointments. As a result, teachers in district high schools felt that recognition was denied them.

In 1919 Superintendent Frank V. Thompson and the school committee, recognizing the injustice of this situation, established a merit list for promotion to headmastership.

Under this merit list the following men head masters have been appointed—Lacey (1919), from High School of Commerce; Richardson (1920), from English high school; Downey (1922), from English high school, Morrison (1923), from Mechanic Arts high school; Regan (1925), from Charlestown high school; Spencer (1925), from Jamaica Plain high school; Denham (1925), from Girls' Latin school; Grover (1926), from Roxbury high school; Masterson (1928), from board of examiners; Rich (1928), from Public Latin school; Powers (1929), from Public Latin school; Keiley (1930), from Dorchester high school for boys; Haley (1934), from Teachers College.

These appointments show that under the merit list two appointments have been made from English High School, seven from Public Latin School and one from each of the following sources: High School of Commerce, Mechanic Arts High School, Charlestown High School, Jamaica Plain High School, Girls' Latin School, Roxbury High School, Dorchester High School for Boys, Teachers College and the Board of Examiners.

As a result, teachers in every department of the schools feel that they will gain recognition and that their promotion is not dependent upon their being attached to any particular school.

During this century three high school headmasters have been elected to the Board of Superintendents; Thompson from High School of Commerce, Snow from English High School and Campbell from the Public Latin School, all boys' high schools.

The question now arises, is the election to the board of superintendents restricted to the headmasters of boys' high schools and brought about by the influence of their alumni?

Are head masters appointed to district high schools or girls' high schools to feel that they may not aspire to higher positions?

I have faith that the school committee in choosing an assistant superintendent will consider the educational background, the experience, the administrative ability, the powers of leadership, etc., of the various candidates.

This should determine the choice rather than the activity of the alumni of any institution in behalf of their head master. It goes without saying that every candidate has the support of the alumni of his school—even though it is not publicized.
